U. S., Soviet Reach Accord On Partition Of Holy Land

Would Set Up Jewish, Arab States By July 1 With British Out May 1

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Russia and the United States today compromised their differences for the first time on a major issue at this United Nations Assembly and agreed on independence for a partitioned Holy Land by next July 1.

Both nations backed down from original proposals in a heartening display of cooperation to solve a tough problem and agreed that the British should give up their mandate over Palestine next May 1. British troops are to be withdrawn by that date.

A commission of three to five members from small nations which favor partition is to be appointed by the General Assembly to administer the country until independent jewish and Arab states are established July 1—or earlier, if possible.

British Approval Uncertain

It will take its authority and guidance from the Security Council, as originally proposed by the Soviet, but it will act on recommendations of the Assembly, as originally sought by the United States, which feared another Security Council stalemate.

Both agreed that the Jewish and Arab states will provide their own militia to police any disorders, such as threatened by the surrounding Arab countries which have vehemently opposed partition.

The agreement was reached by a working group of four nations through the mediation efforts of Lester B. Pearson, Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs for Canada and former Ambassador in Washington.

There was no certainty of British approval. John Martin of the British foreign office could state today only that "these proposals are not without interest to my government."

The British have declared they would not attempt to implement alone any plan for Palestine's partitioning unless the Jewish and Arab factions agree to the proposal. The American and Russian agreement today calls for British administration until May 1.

Many Details Remain

As if to underline Arab objections to partition, another subcommittee made up of the six Arab League states filed their recommendations today calling for a single independent state. It also questioned the legality of the decision it may make on Palestine.

Many details are yet to be worked out, but the broad outlines agreed upon today seemed likely to shorten the time when full agreement is reached. Today's meeting was in startling contrast to the cries of anguish that usually comes from committee meetings where the United States and Russia exchange a daily hot foot.

Soon after the working group came out of its closed meeting, Ksawery Pruxzynski of Poland happily announced: "The language is quite different from what we are accustomed to in this building."

As originally sought by Russia, the British would give up their mandate by January 1 and withdraw troops within three or four months. The Security Council would appoint an 11-nation commission to run the interim government, which was to last about a year.

Russians Appear Pleased

The United States wanted the mandate, which the British have held since 1922, ended by July 1, with troops leaving by that date. There was to be no transition government. Independence would be granted to both states on the day the mandate ends, and a commission appointed by the General Assembly would observe the transfer of administration.

The United States feared Security Council control would mean endless bickering and stalemate on any questions arising from the partitioning. There was also some fear that the Russians would try to send their own troops into Palestine if disorders arose after the British departure, and that American troops might also be required by the Council to restore order. However, the United States can control both by use of its veto power, which has never yet been used.

In any event, the Russians appeared pleased with May 1 as independence day for the partitioned states.

Can't Even Trust Bench If It Is Wired for Sound

Wire Behind Bench . . .

. . . Connected to Police

Lafayette Square, famous for its park bench "office" of elder statesman Bernard Baruch, and as a meeting place for friends and lovers, produced a new wrinkle yesterday—it's wired for sound.

Or at least it was, until last night.

Hidden wires, obviously used to connect to a listening device, yesterday were found leading from bushes behind a park bench in the center of the square to the Park Police Lodge House on H st. nw., northern boundary of the park.

The mysterious wires, representing a rather amateur-like attemp at sleuthing, were discovered by a Washington Post reported at noon, and later photographed. After the various law enforcement agencies in the city were called for comment, which was not forthcoming, the wires were swiftly ripped up during the night.

From the appearance of the wires, one point can probably be ruled out definitely—they had not been there long enough for anyone to listen in on Baruch's "office conversations" of past years.

What had they been used to record? "Sweet nothings" of lovers conversations? Possibly. Espionage agents? Hardly.

Inquiries brought these results:

1. Federal Bureau of Investigation—"I'll tell you categorically that the FBI had nothing to do with a job like that," an official declared in aggrieved tones.
2. Army Criminal Investigation Division—"We have nothing to do with that kind of setup."
3. Metropolitan Police—"We have no connection with it."
4. Park Police—A weighty, "no comment."

Hughes Tells Of $200,000 Loan Request

Refused Meyers Because of Possible Misinterpretation, Airman Testifies

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Millionaire Planebuilder Howard Hughes testified yesterday that Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers asked him for a $200,000 loan to swing a 10 million dollar Government bond deal at a time when Hughes had a contract pending with the Air Forces.

Hughes told the Senate War Investigating Committee that he was "reluctant" to testify about this matter, and insisted that he did not believe Meyers, wartime chief of the Army Materiel Command, had anything "wrong in his mind" when he requested the loan. Hughes refused the loan as open to "misinterpretation."

Also Asked Guarantee

Under the persistent prodding of Subcommittee Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) Hughes disclosed that Meyers also asked him to guarantee against any losses on the bonds which the general proposed to buy on margin.

It was late in the afternoon before the airman could get around to loosing a barrage of his own.

Then Hughes charged that Pan American Airlines have been trying to "pressure" the Air Forces into buying a competitor's photo-reconnaissance plane in order to break into domestic air-line operation.

The tall, slender plane designer-pilot asked the committee to investigate his charge that Pan American had tried to "pressure" officers at Wright Field into placing an order for 19 Republic XF-12s so that Pan American could get nine of the planes at a price it could afford.

Pan American wanted the planes, Hughes said, only so that it could advertise a six and a half hour flight from Los Angeles to New York, and create enough public demand to force the granting of a certificate for such a flight. This could compete with Hughes' Trans-World airline.

Suggests "Pressure" Probe

"I think the committee ought to investigate the pressure applied from above to shove the XF-12 down the throats of active men in the photo-reconnaissance branch," suggested Hughes, firmly and with emphasis, although he had undergone some six hours of cross-questioning on the witness stand.

The involved tale of Meyers' attempted financial deals brought in "The Outlaw," a Hughes movie banned in New York City as too sexy, a trick bicycle, "a high church dignitary," Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, TWA and Idlewild, New York's newest airport.

As the story was dug bit by bit from the protesting airman, General Meyers sat at the same committee table only a few feet down from Hughes, snorting his disagreement with some of the testimony.

Hughes said he was especially troubled to have to testify concerning Meyers because the general had started out as a member of the "Hate Hughes Club at Wright Field" but later became one of his two best friends in

Marshall Calls for Interim Aid Of 597 Millions for 3 Nations; 7.5 Billions Through June, '49

Congress Groups Vote Quick Action On Stopgap Funds; To Quiz Secretary

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Without a voice raised in formal opposition, House and Senate committees yesterday ordered full speed consideration of a $597,000,000 interim-aid authorizattion for France, Italy and Austria.

These developments followed Secretary of State George C. Marshall's request for a "speedy decisions:

1. House Foreign Affairs Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) said he hoped to lay a committee-approved bill before the House by next Wednesday.
2. Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), said: "Our first job is stopgap legislation . . . We will go ahead as rapidly as we can."
3. The special House (Herter) Committee on Foreign Aid rushed separate reports on conditions in France and Italy, but canceled plans to present detailed recommendations today.

To Question Marshall Today

4. The Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs Committees met separately in executive session to approve formal hearing procedures.

The Senate committee agreed to resume hearings at 10 a. m. today to cross-examine Secretary Marshall and Undersecretary Lovett.

The House committee, which had planned to hear Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.) this morning skipped today's meeting at Herter's request. Herter said he wanted the Administration's full case presented first.

The House group will question Marshall tomorrow and members of the Harriman committee on Thursday. The Senate unit will hear the Harriman committee tomorrow and the Herter committee on Thursday.

Vandenberg and Eaton told reporters not a single opposition spokesman had requested either committee for time against the bill.

Communist Chief Seeks Bid

"I'll amend that," said Eaton. "I am told by grapevine that William Z. Foster, head of the Communist Party, wants to be heard."

"Will he be invited to testify?" a reported asked.

"Not if I can help it," replied Eaton.

Committee Stands By

Eaton said his goal is to introduce a committee bill next Monday, when Congress convenes. This will be referred back to the committee "and we hope to get it to the floor by the middle of the week."

Vandenberg set no timetable. He said his group would concentrate on the stopgap bill "but we realize it can't be passed in a vacuum. There will have to be satisfactory, general information presented concerning the long-range plan."

One possible impediment to speed is a still unsettled House jurisdictional question. The House

Truman Reports to Congress:

Military Situation in Greece Darkens as Soviet Backs Rebels

By Robert E. Nichols

President Truman handed Congress a report yesterday revealing that Soviet-backed guerilla troops in Greece are "hampering" the United States' attempts to revive that country's war-torn economy.

The President made it plain that "Greece is still free" only by grace of the 300 million dollars worth of economic and military aid legislated by Congress last spring. And even with this American assistance pouring into Greek ports since May, the President reported, the Greek economic situation "has not basically improved" and the military situation has grown worse.

Expressing "grave concern," he warned Congress that, unless internal order is restored, Greece cannot survive as a free and self-governing nation.

"The difficulties which hamper the success of this program must be overcome," Mr. Truman asserted. "Continuation of marginal subsistence only . . . without real progress toward recovery, will provide fertile ground for totalitarian ideologies."

Mr. Truman pinned the blame for the continuing and increasing guerilla warfare—one of several "unfavorable developments"—directly on "Greece's northern neighbors." At no point did the President name these "northern neighbors," but it was clear he meant the Soviet-nurtured states of Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania.

At least three times, the President's report made veiled reference to the Soviet satellites.

"The continued support of the guerallis by Greece's northern neighbors . . ." he said at one point, has "resulted in an over-all worsening of the military situation."

"In the restoration of internal order," he said at another point, "reliance must be placed on the creation by the United Nations' General Assembly of a commission which can effectively seal the Greek border against assistance to the guerillas from Greece's northern neighbors."

"Defeating the guerilla forces . . .," he said at still another point, "is a task made more difficult by the aid rendered t othe guerillas by Greece's northern neighbors."

The most blunt of the President's charges directed at Communist interference in Greece came in the military section of his report.

"If Greece is to survive as a free and independent nation," he said, "it must preserve its national se-

Occupation Forces Need 500 Millions, China Our Help, Secretary Asserts

Post Reporter

Secretary Marshall asked Congress yesterday for quick authorization of 597 million dollars so that the people of France, Italy and Austria could continue "to eat, to work and to survive the winter."

These would be relief funds "to help provide the essentials of existence" until March 31, the Secretary told a joint session of the Senate and House committees on foreign policy.

After March 31, he went on, the United States would have to embark on a European recovery program costing 7½ billion dollars in the 15-month period ending June 30, 1949, and between 16 and 20 billion dollars over a four-year period.

"We must not permit the free community of Europe to be extinguished," the Secretary warned.

What Helps Europe Helps U. S.

"Should this occur it would be a tragedy for the world. It would impose incalculable burdens upon this country and force serious readjustments in our traditional way of life.

"We can act for our own good by acting for the world's good."

He told the committees of the efforts of the United States, Great Britain and France to restore the "European community" to health and strength.

"It is now clear," he said, "that only one power, the Soviet Union, does not for its own reasons share this aim."

In a reference to Russia's satellites, he said developments in eastern Europe "bear the unmistakeable imprint of an alien hand," and he hinted that the eastern European nations did not take part in the European recovery program because they had not been left free to follow their own wishes.

Going beyond Europe, he announced that a program of economic aid to China was now being drawn up "for early submission" to Congress. This is understood to be a program of short-term relief of a kind which might lay the foundation for later recovery.

"The situation in China continues to cause us deep concern," he said. "The civil war has spread and increased in intensity. The Chinese Communists by force of arms seek control of wide areas of China."

Only the national government of China, "the sole legal government," and its people can really solve China's basic problems, he said, but the United States can and should extend certain help.

500 Million More for Army

He added that Congress would get an immediate request from the Army Department for about 500 million dollars to meet unforeseen occupation costs in Germany, Japan and Korea.

The Secretary read his statement without interruption from the committee members who sat facing him in the crowded Senate caucus room. Behind him, among his aides were Undersecretary Robert A. Lovett and Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas, who had just flown back from London to take a leading part in arguing the Administration's case to Congress.

At the side of the room, in seats arranged like a jury-box at a trial, sat members of the Herter Committee of the House, who spent six weeks in Europe investigating economic conditions.

Most of the Secretary's 5000-word statement was a detailed account of the emergency relief proposals and also a preliminary outline of the Administration's coming program for long-term European recovery.

The relief request had been cut below the State Department's original figures by 45 million dollars, partly because the Bureau of the Budget had trimmed the estimates and partly because of cuts suggested by American economic attaches brought back from their posts in Paris and Rome.

As Congress got the request today, it was divided as follows:

For France, 328 million dollars.
For Italy, 227 million.
For Austria, 42 million.

Secretary Marshall explained that these funds would be needed

2% Sales Tax Figured in Budget Boost

Would Be Added Feature, D. C. to Keep All Present Levies

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A 100-million-dollar District budget is in the making for the fiscal year starting next July 1.

Present plans of top District officials call for using all present local taxes plus a 2 per cent retail sales tax to finance the proposed budget.

The sales tax would produce the money needed to boost the budget from its present level of about 95.5 million to the proposed new mark. Congress would have to pass a law to establish the sales tax.

These plans were disclosed yesterday as Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) called anew for a sales tax to finance necessary city services and to expand school and other facilities.

Led Fight Earlier

Horan led a fight in Congress earlier this year for passage of a District sales tax. He based the fight largely on the study of local school construction needs which he made as chairman of the House Subcommittee in charge of the District appropriation bill.

Washington's Commissioners, too, formally asked Congress to approve a 2 per cent sales tax for the District. The proposal was turned down, but they still favor it.

There is one main difference between the sales tax ideas of the Commissioners and Representative Horan.

The Commissioners proposed a sales tax with exemptions for food, medicine, and some other items. Horan is against all exemptions. He favors putting the proposed sales

Trial Board To Hear Case Of Fire Chief

Murphy Is Accused Of Demoralizing D. C. Department

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A special three-man trial board of laymen will be appointed to hear charges that Fire Chief Clement Murphy demoralized the District Fire Department, the Commissioners decided yesterday.

Members of the trial board will be appointed by the Commissioners. Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Youn, said the Commissioners had the "person in mind, but have not yet contacted them."

The Commissioners decided to bypass the usual Fire Department trial board since it is composed of a representative of the department and two persons from the corporation counsel and auditor's offices. Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West said the Fire Department trial board would not be practical in thsi case because "a representative from the Fire Department would necessarily be subordinate to the chief and we couldn't have a subordinate trying a superior."

Hearing to be Public

The public hearing will be held as soon as the charges against the fire chief are prepared, the Commissioners said, and will be based on a sharply critical report of Murphy's regime made by the corporation counsel's office.

The report, The Washington Post disclosed last week, upheld charges made by Fire Capt. Joseph W. Conroy that Chief Murphy's administration had demoralized the department.

The report also charged that the chief, veteran of 29 years of service in the department, was

2 Killed When B-29 Crashes Into Stored Fighter Planes

Oklahoma City, Nov. 10 (AP).—Two crew members were killed and five others injured, one critically, when their Army B-29 bomber crashed into an aircraft storage area on a take-off from Tinker Army Airfield here late today.

The huge plane exploded, broke into four pieces and burned. Several P-47 fighter planes were destroyed by fire and others damaged.

Names of the two men killed were not disclosed pending notification of next of kin.

The injured were listed by the Army public relations officer as First Lieut. D. E. Quilin, pilot; M/Sergt Wendell G. McFarlin; S/Sergt. Pasquale A. Mazi, Corpl. Robert A. Quinn and Pfc. J. F. Anderson.

The station hospital declined to idetnify the man critically injured.

The huge plane crashed while taking off on a return flight to its home base at Smoky Hill Army Air Field, Salina, Kans.

Witnesses said the plane had traveled about one mile, then suddenly had dipped to one side and crashed amid hundreds of decommissioned P-47 Thunderbolt fighter planes. They said it was a miracle any of the crew survived.

Air Force officials said several fighter planes were destroyed and about 12 others damaged.

The injured were taken to the field's station hospital.

The Tinker Field fire department responded and assistance was sent from nearby Midwest City and Oklahoma City.

A radio appeal was sent out to farmers in the area to bring their tractors to haul the stored aircraft out of the danger zone.

Tinker Field is one of the Air Force's largest maintenance depots.

Justice Department Takes Stand Against Racial Convenants

Whelan Store in Longfellow Building Target of Complaint

The Justice Department yesterday came out flatly against racial covenants—which bar Negroes, and others, from renting or buying in "white" areas.

The department told the Supreme Court that for judges to enforce such covenants was against the Constitution, against the law and against the public policy of the United States.

Attorney General Tom C. Clark and Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman asked leave to take part in four cases which have put the legality of such covenants squarely up to the justices.

Two of these are appeals from rulings of the United States Court of Appeals here. By a two-to-one vote, the Washington court upheld deeds which barred Negroes from an area in the 100 block of Bryant st. nw. A third such case came from Detroit, and a fourth from St. Louis. The court has been asked to hear two others from Los Angeles, and a seventh from Columbus, Ohio.

The Justice Department said in its motion:

Protesting that a pledge made to a Government agency to permit Negroes to eat at a cafeteria in the Longfellow Building is being violated, more than 100 persons staged a demonstration there yesterday.

The group, composed of Negro and white men and women, jammed a newly opened Whelan Drug Store on the ground floor of the building at Connecticut and Rhode Island aves., while several squads of police stood by.

An official of the Federal Public Housing Administration confirmed the report that a Whelan company employe on October 10, 1946, assured them that "this company, of course, has no policy which would lead to discrimination against Negroes as customers of our stores in Washington, D. C., or elsewhere."

The following March, said PHA, Percy S. Simpson, then district manager for Whelan's here, gave similar assurances.

PHA said it had entered the matter as "an interested party," on behalf of its employes. PHA said it had first suggested, early in 1945, that Government Services, Inc., establish a cafeteria on the ground floor as there was no place nearby for Negroes to eat.

Last fall, said PHA, the building owners served notice that GSI's lease would not be continued, and the space was leased to Whelan. "Not until last week," said a PHA

Washington Honors War Dead Today

President to Lead Nation in Armistice Rites at Arlington

Greater Washington will remember its war dead today with observances at the cemeteries and war memorials.

Leading the celebration of Armistice Day, President Truman will enter Arlington Cemetery to the booming salute of 21 guns, to lay a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

His act of homage, scheduled for 11 a. m., will open one of many services in the area commemorating the end of the First World War 29 years ago.

Although rain is forecast for the late afternoon or evening, yesterday's Weather Bureau prediction for the morning was limited to "cloudy and mild."

U. S., D. C. Holiday

The day is a holiday for employes of the Federal and District governments, for public and parochial school children of most of Greater Washington, and for bank employes. The only schools open will be in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, Md.

While many business offices will be closed, department stores will be open for business all day. All public libraries will be closed except the Central Library, open from 1 to 9 p. m.

Railroads have not scheduled any special trains for the holiday, but are prepared to add sections if necessary. The AAA does not expect an unusual amount of touring on the one-day vacation.

All local courts will be closed except for a short Municipal Court session.

The principal observance of the day will be opened by the President's placing of his wreath. The program to follow in the Amphi-

Reuther's Forces Defeat Leftists in Union Convention

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 10.—President Walter P. Reuther's right-wing forces cemented their control of the turbulent CIO United Auto Workers today, when the union voted overwhelmingly to comply with the anti-Communist affidavit requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The action, taken at the union's annual convention, was bitterly fought by the left-wing group, opposing Reuther not only on the affidavit issue, but also in the election of officers, to take place tomorrow.

But as their voices rose, their strength diminshed. They had, in fact, already suffered a worse defeat earlier in the day. At the morning session, the convention heard CIO President Philip Murray indorse Reuther in his campaign for reelection as head of the auto union.

Won't Back Others

But Murray steadfastly refused to indorse other candidates, including his old friends in the opposition group. They are George E. Addes, R. J. Thomas and Richard Leonard, seeking reelection to the secretary-treasurer and two vice presidential posts.

Murray mentioned them gently, but with warmth that was decidedly luke.

Speaking to the convention, Murray said that Addes was "a man of integrity" and with "certain outstanding qualities." Thomas, the officer whom Murray had publicly blessed with an indorsing embrace 18 months ago, had declined to being merely "not a bad

'Captious' Legalism Hit

Court Rules Torpedoed Alien Is Not Liable for Deportation

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Nine Supreme Court judges who have split on many matters agreed yesterday that a sailor doesn't lose his right to live here just because the Germans sank his ship.

America is home to Jose Audon Salazar Delgadillo, and has been since his parents brought him here from Mexico in 1923. He was a baby then. He never left until June 13, 1942, when he answered the call for men to man our merchant fleet, and sailed from Los Angeles for New York.

After going through the Panama Canal, the ship was torpedoed. Delgadillo drifted two days in an open boat. Then he was picked up and taken to Havana, where the American consul cared for him and sent him to Miami.

Two years later he got into trouble and got a year to life in jail for robbery in California. The Immigration Service claimed Delgadillo was found guilty of a crime within five years of his last "entering" this country. The "entry," said the service, was at Miami.

One Federal court said this was all wrong, another said Delgadillo would have to go back to Mexico. Justice Douglas yesterday had this to say:

"Respect for law does not thrive on captious interpretations."

Douglas pointed out that if Delgadillo's ship had not gone down, and he had landed safely in New York, there would have been no ground for sending him back to Mexico.

"We might as well hold," the justice added, "that if he had been kidnaped and taken to Cuba, he made a statutory 'entry' on his voluntary return."

The court, said Douglas, would not add the danger of deportation to the other perils of the sea. So Delgadillo stays in this country.

General Tried to Borrow $200,000, Hughes Testifies

Washington. The other, he declared, was Jesse Jones.

Hughes flatly denied previous testimony by Meyers that the millionaire planebuilder had offered him during the war a postwar job in which he could name his own salary.

"I wasn't looking for a general manager after the war," Hughes told the committee, "because I had sense enough to know they'd be a dime a dozen then."

Says It Wasn't True

Pressed as to Meyers' testimony that Hughes had offered him a job where he could "write my own ticket," Hughes said.

"I say it wasn't true."

Hughes told the committee that his refusal to lend the $200,000 resulted "in a complete breach of friendship between me and Benny Meyers."

Hughes said he seemed to recall in connection with Meyers' request for $200,000 that Meyers told him he had made "similar transactions with other people."

Hughes said he did not know whether these people were contractors or not.

"When I finally and definitely turned down the loan proposition," Hughes added, "I thought General Meyers was going to find some way to throw a monkey wrench into that F-11 plane contract if it was the last thing he ever did."

But, Hughes pointed out, it was obvious Meyers did not interfere since the contract was subsequently approved and granted.

Hughes cited this as a proof that the loan and the contract had no relationship in Meyers' eyes.

The term "'Liberty Bonds" was used by the committee and by Hughes in referring to the transaction Meyers had attempted to swing, probably because that was the term used by Neil McCarthy, a former attorney for Hughes, who first gave sworn testimony on the attempted deal.

John H. Amen, attorney for Meyers, and Treasury officials explained, however, that it was other Government bonds which were meant, not Liberty Bonds.

How It Could Be Done

Treasury officials said it would have been possible in 1944 for a man to swing a 10-million-dollar Government bond purchase by putting up $200,000 of his own money, plus $9,800,000 of borrowed funds. If he bought at or below par—100—profit would come when the market rose above par. He could sell out at 102, for example, pay back his creditors and be $200,000 to the good.

Amen said this type of dealing in Government bonds was usually done by persons who were friends of the bankers holding the Government bonds.

Hughes was asked if he had brought this attempt on the part of Meyers to the attention of Gen. H. H. Arnold, wartime head of the Army Air Forces, or any other military official.

"I certainly did not," replied Hughes. "Why should I?"

He had previously explained that he didn't think that Meyers felt he was doing anything wrong in suggesting the loan.

"Why didn't you bring this matter to the attention of this committee when you were here before?" queried Ferguson.

Thought He Was Target

"Senator, I thought yuo were out to put the spotlgiht of evil action on me. I didn't think you were looking for anyone else," returned Hughes.

"Did you think the loan would be wrong?" Ferguson persisted.

"I would not be wrong," Hughes declared, "unless Benny Meyers intended to sell out the Government. I was convinced he felt in his mind he was doing nothing wrong."

Meyers was so furious when he refused the loan, Hughes testified, that "as far as I know, he didn't speak to me for two years afterward."

Hughes said he made up his own mind to say "no" but had consulted his then attorney to see if there was any way the request could be turned down without incurring Meyer's hostility.

Knew He Was Powerful fl

"I knew he was a very powerful politician in the Army and I knew he could find a way to jimmy that contract if he wanted to," Hughes said.

"I think the fact he did not interfere is a proof of his honesty in this matter," Hughes declared.

Hughes said he recalled that Meyers stated he could get the approval of General Arnold for the transaction if he agreed to have nothing to do with any of Hughes' business from that time out.

Ferguson pressed Hughes over and over as to why, if he saw nothing wrong in the transaction, he did not agree to it.

Hughes repeated that it might be subject to misinterpretation.

Then he added:

"Well maybe I didn't want to take a chance. I might be wrong about what was in Benny Meyers' mind."

Quotes Phone Conversation

Ferguson quoted a telephone conversation with McCarthy, polo-playing West Coast lawyer who once represented Hughes.

McCarthy said Hughes told him that Meyers tried to "stand him up." Later the expression "shake down" was used.

His next transaction with Meyers, Hughes told the committee, came in connection with the New York City ban on his motion picture, "The Outlaw."

Jack Frye, former TWA official, had told him, Hughes said, that he believed it was Meyers who had stymied a TWA deal in connection with facilities at Idlewild, New York airport.

Frye suggested he make his peace with Meyers, Hughes said, because he understood it was Meyers, who was blocking New York City showing of "The Outlaw," too.

Ferguson asked how a former Air Force official could block a motion picture.

"Well, we were told he was very close to O'Dwyer and the city government there," Hughes replied.

His reference was to Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York. In New York O'Dwyer confirmed the fact that he had served during the war as an officer in the section of the Army Air Forces headquarters commanded by Meyers.

Finally, Hughes said, he suggested that Meyers come to California to "patch things us." It was on that trip probably, Hughes said, that he expended some $3000 in transportation and entertainment expenses for Meyers.

"I asked him," Hughes testified, "if he were blocking the showing in New York, and if so, would he do something to unblock it."

The handsome airman declared that Meyers had never said he had blocked the picture, although he left the impression he might have done so.

Didn't Want to Lose Face

Hughes said Meyers reported that he had seen O'Dwyer and that nothing could be done because a lot of politicians had gone on record about the picture and didn't want to lose face by taking it all back.

"Didn't you offer Meyers a certain sum of money if he were able to get "The Outlaw" put on in New York."

"I don't recall it, Senator," Hughes replied.

"Did you tell him you'd give him $100,000 if he were able to get 'The Outlaw' produced in New York?" Ferguson pressed.

"I don't recall it, Senator," Hughes answered.

Meyers said last night Hughes offered him $100,000 if he could get "The Outlaw" released for showing. Meyers said he refused of dertain scenes in it.

Thought Him a 'Finger' Man

Hughes said he understood that Benjamin Fielding, former license commissioner, now health commissioner, was one of the men "who put the finger on 'The Outlaw.'"

Ferguson asked the motion picture-plane producer if he had asked Meyers to see "a certain high church dignitary."

Hughes said he "might have" told Meyers he'd be very pleased if the Legion of Decency would okay the picture.

"Did you suggest his going to see Cardinal Spellman?" asked Hughes.

"I don't remember that, Senator," Hughes answered.

"When Meyers came to the Coast, did you talk over any other business deal with him?" Ferguson asked.

Gen. Merrill's Condition 'Good' At Walter Reed

Brig. Gen. Frank D. Merrill, 44, leader of the famed "Merrill's Marauders" in Burma during the war, was reported in good condition yesterday at Walter Reed General Hospital, where he was admitted Sunday for treatment of a heart condition.

General Merrill was flown from Manila, where he was a member of the United States Military Commission advising the Philippine government on reorganization of its army.

Merrill's Marauders, a volunteer group, covered 750 miles of Burma jungles in 100 days, harassing the Japanese in 37 engagements in 1944. General Merrill participated in Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's heroic march out of Burma two years before the organization of the Marauders.

AAA Manager Urges Car Dealers To Correct Abuses

W. I. Cleveland, manager of the District American Automobile Association, yesterday urged car manufacturers and dealers to "correct the chaotic condition in the new and used car market."

Addressing a luncheon meeting of the AAA's District advisory board at the Mayflower Hotel, Cleveland cited the recently-ended national AAA convention for its action in recognizing present new and used car distribution problems.

Other speakers included Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District director of highways, and William L. Robinson, assistant director of the AAA's traffic and safety engineering division.

curity. Although the number fo rebel guerillas threatening this security is small, they are fanatically led by Communists who have recruited many hardened criminals, and who have forced loyal Greeks into their service by threats against them or their families."

The President disclosed that "intensification of military operations" because of guerillas has forced the United States to transfer t oits military aid program funds originally earmarked for reconstruction and recovery. At the outset, the 300 million dollars was divided almost equally between the economic and military programs. Now the military will receive roughly 168 million dollars.

While the necessity for stepped-up military operations appeared to occupy the major section of the President's report dealing with obstacles to the American programs, he outlined what he called "several unfavorable developments" affecting both Greek and Turkish aid—"but most seriously that for Greece."

These included:

1. "As a result of the drought, this year's grain crop is expected to be only two-thirds normal."

2. "Increasing worlds prices have reduced the buying power of the "present Greek aid funds."

3. "Greek commerce and industry remain lethargic because of the reluctance of businessmen to invest funds in Greek enterprises under present unstabl conditions, or to arn drachmas which they fear may be made valueless by another inflation."

Internal Order First Essential

4. "Exports have not, because of internal economic and security conditions, reached ah high a level as might reasonably have been expected some months ago."

5. "The general diruption of Eutional markets for Greek goods reropean trade and the loss of tradimain a serious blow to the economy."

"It can nevertheless be said," Mr. Truman concluded, "that all of the necessary elements for Greek recovery are now present and can begin to b operative once internal order is establishd."

Congress Committees Vote Full Speed Ahead on Aid

Banking Committee, which customarily handles international and domestic financing legislation, is standing by in case Herter committee recommendations for a new Government corporation to handle foreign aid are considered in connection with the interim bill.

Secretary Marshall yesterday recommended that no new agency be set up to run the interim program. He brought with him the Administration's own draft of a bill authorizing the President to proceed through existing agencies.

The proposed 597-million-dollar aid authorization, to carry France, Italy and Austria through March 31, will be handled apart from 500 million dollars additional required for occupied territories. The latter request, to be presented by the Army, probably will be cleared directly through the Appropriations committees in the form of a deficiency measure.

Aid Conditions Outlined

Marshall's draft of a bill specified that before any interim relief funds are made available abroad, the United States will enter agreements with recipient countries. The recipient country would undertake:

1. To make efficient use of supplies and take "in so far as possible the economic measures necessary to increase its ability to achieve a self-sustaining economy."

2. To make "a commensurate deposit" in its own currency for any commodities received under special account to be used only for the act. This would go into a purposes agreed upon by the United States and the recipient country.

3. To give "full and continuous publicity" to the purpose, source, character and amounts of commodities received.

4. To furnish information on distribution and use at the President's request.

The bill also follows the pattern of the last general foreign relief authorization in its "labeling" requirements.

Containers bearing relief commodities would have to be "marked, stamped, branded or labeled in a conspicuous place as legibly, indelibly and permanently as the nature of such containers will permit, in such a manner as to indicate to the people of the country of destination that such commodities have been furnished or made available by the United States."

George to Receive Catholic Address On Royal Wedding

London, Nov. 10 (AP).—A palace spokesman said today that King George VI has consented to receive Thursday from Bernard Cardinal Griffin the official congratulations of the Roman Catholic Church in England and Wales on the impending marriage of Princess Elizabeth.

The monarch relaxed terms of an ecclesiastical act which bars the use by Catholics of their church titles in signing an address to the king. The ceremony of presentation in the palace will mark the first time in modern British history that a Catholic cardinal has given his official congratulations on a royal wedding.

Cardinal Griffin, as Archbishop of Westminster, is the ranking Catholic churchman in Britain. He will be received after the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, ranking Anglican prelates, make similar congratulatory addresses.

Marshall Asks 597 Millions For Aid Now, 7.5 Billions Later largely for food, fuel, fertilizer, seed and medical supplies which the three countries could no longer buy because of their lack of dollars.

He specified that each country getting relief should set aside local currency equivalent to the value of the goods it gets from America, to be used "only for such purposes as we and the recipient country might agree." Each receiving country would also have to tell its own people the source of the supplies and would have to give the United States full information about their use.

Against Stopgap Agency

The Secretary argued strongly that no new agency would be needed to handle this short-term relief. Existing Government agencies could do the job, he said, until some new agency was set up to handle the long-term recovery effort.

He expressed the belief that the 597 million dollars would be enough to tide the three countries over until next March 31, "before which time," he said, "we hope that some decision may have been taken by the Congress regarding a broad recovery program."

As to the recovery program, the so-called "Marshall Plan," the Secretary's estimates of cost were the first to come from the Administration after more than four months of intensive study.

Marshall Plan Costs Set

He divided them as follows:

For the three-month period between April 1 and June 30, 1948, $1,500,000,000;

For the following 12 months ending June 30, 1949, six billions; and

For the next four years ending June 30, 1952, between 16 and 20 billions.

These figures were not very different from those worked out independently by the Harriman committee. In its report to President Truman last Saturday the Harriman group estimated the cost at $5,750,000,000 in the next 12 months.

The Harriman group also estimated the four-year cost between 12 and 17 billions. The difference between this and Secretary Marshall's 16-to-20-billion estimate was understood to have come from different calculations as to the range of prices.

In outlining the long-term recovery program, Secretary Marshall disclosed three main decisions by the Administration, as follows:

(1) There must be a strong administrative agency to manage the program, with plenty of flexibility in using its funds. It should, however, make use of existing Government agencies, and should make its work conform fully to American foreign policy. To coordinate American and European efforts, and to represent the United States on the continuing organization of the 16 European nations, there should be a top American representative in Europe with the rank of ambassador.

(2) Consumable goods like food and fuel should, in general, be supplied as grants-in-aid; capital equipment and raw materials, in general, by loans.

(3) The United States should make bilateral agreements with each of the receiving countries, committing them to put their financial houses in order, to push toward their announced production goals, and to cooperate in reducing trade barriers.

The Secretary also emphasized that Congress should provide Europe with dollars to buy commodities outside the United States. He argued that such buying would not only help to prevent inflation here, but would help the non-European supplying countries like Canada and the Latin American republics, all of which are short of dollars.

"Just as the progress of each individual country among the 16 will affect the progress of the others," he said, "so the recovery of Europe will inevitably be a significant link in a chain reaction creating or maintaining economic activities in other countries."

He described the whole program as one of "construction, production and recovery" which "menaces no one." Its aim, he said, was simply to see the European countries self-supporting again.

NAM Asks Aid Hinged On Halt to Socialism

By The Associated Press

The National Association of Manufacturers yesterday called on this country to "sell" the free enterprise system along with foreign aid.

Among other things, the association asked that countries receiving United States aid pledge not to nationalize their industries and resources further, and not to undertake any projects which might impair private competitive enterprise.

NAM President Earl Bunting laid the association's position before President Truman at a White House conference.

Taft Demands That Aid To Europe Be 'Reasonable'

New York, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Senator Robert A. Taft, in a sweeping criticism of the Marshall Plan, said tonight he was in favor of "reasonable" European aid but not tremendous expenditures that would lead to unbearable taxes, inflation and restoration of price controls.

Taft spoke at a banquet of the Ohio Society of New York.

Red Member Veto Condemned in U. N.

Action by Security Council Asked on 6 Barred Nations

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 10 (U.P.).—The United Nations Political Committee today condemned Russia's veto of six nations seeking United Nations membership, asked the Security Council to reconsider them, and called on the Big Five powres to confer privately on the East-West membership dispute.

The committee also voted to ask the International Court of Justcie for a ruling on whether a country can be barred from the U. N. for reasons beyond those in the broad membership provisions of the charter.

Russian Objections

Over vigorous Russian bojection—and amid indications that the action would have little practical effect—the committee called for Securiyt Council reconsideration of Ireland, Austria, Portugal, Trans-Jordan, Italy and Finland, all vetoed this summer by Russia after winning majority approval in the council.

In the case of two, Italy and Trans-Jordan, the committee stipulated the Council should act before the end of the current general assembly session.

To that Soviet Delegate Andrei Gromyko replied tersely: "There may be come optimists here who believe this can be done before the end of this session. I am not one of these optimists."

Rejections Indorsed

By omission, the committee indorsed the Security Council's rejection of Albania, Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania and Outer Mongolia, all favored by Russia and Poland, but blocked by the majority of the Council.

The committee's action culminated a long debate peppered with small-nation assaults on the great power veto and western power denunciations of Russia's use of that veto to keep majority-backed countries out of the U. N.

All of the committee's recommendations except one—the proposal for private Big Five consultations—were carried overwhelmingly and were certain of final approval by the full Assembly. The exception, Poland's proposal for a Big Five huddle, carried by a close 24-to-14 ballot, and was subject to reversal in the Assembly.

Effect of the committee decisions was to recognize the Security Council's right to block membership applications before they reach the Assembly and at the same time pile more pressure on the Soviet Union to withhold or renounce its veto power in the field of U. N. membership.

Gets Wilson Award

Baruch Sees U. N. as Last Hope of Men

New York, Nov. 10.—Bernard M. Baruch, America's adviser to Presidents, declared tonight that the United Nations must be made to "live and grow." For otherwise, warned the man who submitted the American plan for atomic control to international negotiation, "we cannot count on a third chance."

At the same time, Warren R. Austin, chief American delegate to the UN, asserted the world organization was determined "to move forward in spite of the lack of agreement among the larger powers upon many important matters."

Austin cited assembly majorities which had indorsed a Greek border watch commission, a commission to prepare for Korean independence and creation of a year's test "Little Assembly," as well as the Security Council's dispatch of a good offices commission to Indonesia.

The occasion was the award to Baruch—"one of the great events of my life," he called it—of the Woodrow Wilson prize for distinguished service, at the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Mrs. Wilson and the late President's daughter, Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, were among 300 guests present.

Now seventy-seven, Baruch, unpaid World War I chairman of the War Industries Board, told the diners it was "the incomparable Woodrow Wilson . . . who planted the seeds of service within me." For his text, he took the Wilson admonition to assess causes of distress and ascertain the best means of removing them.

Radar Impulse May Explode Flash Bulbs

A possibility that photographers' flash bulbs, niadvertently exploded by radar impulses, may cause fires aboard aircraft has been advanced by General Electric Corp., scientists.

Nor is the possibility considered lightly by members of the Safety Bureau, Civil Aeronautics Board, who yesterday disclosed they were studying the scientific findngs with intent to review airplane crashes of unexplained origin.

The warning was sounded in a special bulletin to suppliers of General Electric products, announcing that future shipments of the flash bulbs would not be made on radar influenced air routes. The bulletin also asked that news photographers using the bulbs be warned.

Experiments to Show Danger

"Recent experiments have established that photo flash lamps, with the exceptino of th eprimer type, can be ignited by high energy shortwave electromagnetic radiation such as that encountered from radar transmitters," the GE warning declared.

The bulletin, received here by the G. E. Supply Co., 1330 New York ave. nw., pointed out that the danger should be made known to photographers "as a matter of air safety," and "in the interest of the general public."

John M. Chamberlain, acting director of the Safety Bureau, CAB, revealed last night that the aviation engineers are "studying the findings to determine the extent of the danger."

To Review Accidents

"Offhand," declared Chamberlain, "I cannot state any one case that might have been caused by such action. But the bureau will review any past airplane accidents whose causes have not definitely been established." . . . . . .

Chamberlain said the bureau has He pointed out, however, that many sent for more information on the nature of the G. E. experiments. military operations were carried on in which flash bulbs were carried in radar-influenced planes without report of such action.

Grand Mufti Ready to Fight Jewish State

Beirut, Lebanon, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Haj Amin El Husseini, exiled Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, said today that the Arabs would fight anybody they had to in order to prevent a Jewish state in Palestine.

He intimated that the Arab states would join fully in the fight, that they would even go to the length of opposing 'any international force sent to Palestine by the United Nations after the British withdrew, and that American Middle-Eastern oil interests would suffer.

He intimated also that the Arab states would, as threatened, leave the U. N. if the partition of Palestine became a fact.

The 56-year-old spiritual and political leader denied charges, long made against him, that he collaborated with the Axis powers during the war.

Husseini is the guest of the Lebanese government in a heavily guarded hotel high in the mountains 15 miles from Beirut.

Of 10 questions which were submitted to him, the Mufti answered eight. He left unanswered one concerning a possible Communist threat to the Arab world and one on the possible future position of the Trans-Jordan Arab Legion which serves under British officers.

Women Urge Nuptial Bid For Duchess

London, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Indignant American women are demanding that the Duchess of Windsor be admitted to Princess Elizabeth's wedding, and are thinking that Marshall Plan aid to Britain ought to be withheld if the duchess remains socially ostracized, it was disclosed today.

Letters from the duchess' supporters in the United States are arriving at Marlborough House, massive London home of Queen Mother Mary, but are not being answered.

This was admitted by a functionary, who said that not only women, but men, are writing the Queen Mother on the subject. One such letter arrived today from Herbert Kempton of Riverside, Calif., the functionary said.

Mrs. Thelma Hall Quast of Beggs, Okla., informed the United Press London bureau that she is one of many American women who were "downright indignant" at the treatment accorded the Baltimore-born duchess and that letters to this effect had been sent to Marlborough House.

Observers here attribute the virtual exile of the duke and duchess to the unwavering opposition of the Queen Mother, who has never forgiven the American divorcee for causing her son to abdicate.

Mrs. Quast said she and her friends felt that the United States ought to withhold Marshall Plan aid until the British royal family agreed to accept the duchess as the wife of a former King of England should be received.

Meanwhile, the duke and duchess have sailed to the United States on the Queen Mary for a visit that presumably will keep them there until the November 20 wedding is over.

'Forever Amber' Author's Ex-Mate On Marital Spot

Las Vegas, Nev., Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Marine Lieut. Robert J. Herwig, former husband of Novelist Kathleen Winsor, was arrested today for making a false statement on his application to marry a 20-year-old coed, but he was released quickly after posting $300 cash bail and ordered to appear Thursday.

The former All-America football star was taken from the honeymoon cottage he and Nadia Hegeman were occupying and brought into court, Herwig, 32, and Miss Hegeman were married here last Thursday. Through the marriage Herwig found himself in as complicated a marital status as his former wife and her present husband, Bandleader Artie Shaw.

District Attorney Robert E. Jones ordered Herwig arrested for saying that he and the author of "Forever Amber" had a final divorce while actually the decree does not become final until next month.

Siam Premier and Council Named by Songgram, Military

Bangkok, Siam, Nov. 10 (AP).—The military clique ruling Siam by virtue of a bloodless revolt, imposed a new consttitution today upon the country, under which the monarchy regained some of the powers it lost more than a year ago.

Pibul Songgram, the wartime premier-dictator of Siam, and his military associates, appointed Luang Aphaiwongse as premier, and named a five-man privy council, which swiftly promulgated the new constitution.

Songgram, who led the revolt yesterday which overthrew the government of Premier Thamrong Nawasuwat, has no post thus far in the new regime. He is known to be regarded with disfavor by the United States and Britain because of his collaboration with the Japanese during the war.

U. S. Awaits Information

[In Washington, the United States State Department said it needed more information about the overthrow of the Siamese government before it could decide on whether to extend recognition to the new regime.]

[Prince Subhas Svasti Svastivat said at Lake Success, N. Y., he would quit his post with the Siamese delegation to the United Nations Assembly if he were not assured that the new Siamese regime were completely democratic.]

[The Prince, who worked with the Siamese underground to aid the Allies during the war, said the delegation had received brief instructions from Bangkok to "carry on" while efforts were being made to form a new government. U. N. officials said the Siamese delegates would continue to receive recognition as long as they retain their credentials.]

New Constitution

Under the new constitution, drafted by Seni Pramot, former premier and one-time ambassador to the United States, the parliament will continue as a two-chamber body, but the Senate will be appointed by the King instead of elected by the people.

In May of last year, King Ananda Mahidol signd a constitution which abolished the appointive feature in the legislature, and permitted formation of political parties which had been outlawed since 1933.

A month later he died of a gunshot wound and was succeeded by his brother, Phumiphon Aldulet, who will attain his majority next month.

The new privy council replaced the two-man regency of Prince Rangsit of Chainat and Phya Manawarat Sewi. Both were named, however, to the five-member council. Others appointed were Luang Adul Detcharas, police general and acting commander-in-chief of the Siamese army, Lt. Gen. Momchao Alongkod, and Phra Pasart Bidayayudh.

Two Washington men went on trial in Prince Georges County Circuit Court at Marlboro, Md., yesterday for the rape of a 24-year-old girl near Cheverly Manor, Md., last June 2.

They are Thomas C. Chambers, 26, or 4689 A st. se., and William P. Brown, 30, of 1629 Corcoran st. nw.

A jury of 11 men and one woman heard the girl testify yesterday that she was raped several times during a taxi ride into Maryland. She said she "had been having a few drinks" and was sitting on steps of a house in the 1600 block of Q st. nw., when one of the men offered to get her a cab. He brought the cab, she said, then got into it after her.

Both the man and the driver raped her, she charged.

While the D. C. National Guard has not planned separate observances, members will participate in various programs. Its commanding general, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, issued an Armistice Day message reminding citizens of the campaign to recruit 3200 local Guardsmen by November 16. The present total is 1109.

"While we are interfering with no government elsewhere," said General Cox, "we should see that no government elsewhere shall interfere with ours. We must guard what we possess and hold what we have. To be successful in this, we must maintain our armament at as a high a standard of efficiency as the safety of this country demands, and as its resources and other conditions permit."

Hen Buying Plan Designed To Cull Flocks

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday a chicken buying program designed to spur culling of low producing hens from poultry flocks to save grain for aid abroad.

The program also is designed, officials said, to conserve poultry supplies for later use.

Hens bought under the program will be placed in cold storage and released back to the consumer meat trade later when supplies of both poultry and red meats are much scarcer than at present.

Some of the poultry may also be sold to the armed services and some exported.

Luckman Invites Proposals

Meanwhile major millers were asked yesterday to submit a voluntary grain conservation proposal for their industry to the Citizens Food Committee this week.

Chairman Charles Luckman sent telegrams to representatives of 23 large firms in the wet and dry milling industries asking them to meet with him here at 9:30 a. m. (EST) Thursday bringing a "definite proposal for the maximum conservation of grain."

The chicken-buying announcement said the program was requested by organized poultry producers and farm organizations to help the latter carry out their pledge to the committee to reduce laying flocks 130 million head by January 1.

Market Assured Poultrymen

This would be 40 million more hens than normally could be expected to be culled, the department said. It would leave about 400 million laying hens on farms on January 1.

The culliing pledge was made when the committee did away with the "poultryless Thursday" phase of its campaign to conserve 100 million bushels of grain to help feed Europe this winter.

The department said the buying program will assure poultrymen a market for their culled chickens and also save possibly 30 million bushels of grain between now and next October 1.

Processors to Do Buying

Poultrymen will be offered 15 cents a pound, liveweight, for hens weighing between 3½ and 4½ pounds, and 20 cents for those weighing over 4½ pounds. Officials said hens are selling slightly below these prices in some sections of the Midwest where the bulk of the culling will be done.

The department will buy through processors. The latter must pay the producer prices set by the department. They, in turn, will get 22.5 cents a pound for the lighter hens and 28 cents for the heavier ones, Grade A New York style dress.

Grade B quality will be acceptable at 3 cents a pound under Grade A prices at both producer and processor levels.

Collectors to Meet

The Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., will meet at 8 tonight at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw. Members of the recently organized Pentagon Philatelic Society will be guests. The public is invited.

Welles-Hayworth

Court Cuts Rita's Bond To Orson

RITA HAYWORTH,

Los Angeles, Nov. 10 (AP).—Mink-swathed Rita Hayworth of the movies objected to being a 25 per cent wife. So today she won a divorce from actor - writer - director - producer Orson Welles.

Charging the one-time "boy wonder" of the theatrical world with cruelty, the actress told superior court that Welles was away from home three-fourths of the time during their marriage of slightly over four years.

"Mr. Welles," said Mrs. Welles, "showed no interest in establishing a home. Mr. Welles told me he never should have married in the first place, as it interfered with his freedom in his way of life."

The actress was awarded custody of their daughter, who is 3, plus $50 a week for her support. Welles did not contest the action.

Miss Hayworth's business agent, Charles E. Trazona, testified that the actress, as recently as a few weeks ago, was agreeable to a reconcilliation, but that Welles was unwilling. The dancing actress, 29, whose real name is Margarita Cansino, and Welles, 32, were married September 7, 1943. It was the second marriage for both.

Red Affidavit Interpretation Hit by AFL

A local AFL official yesterday attacked the National Labor Relations Board's interpretation of the Communist-affidavit proviso of the Taft-Hartley law.

William J. Hine, business representative for Local 781, Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders' International Union, charged that the board's ruling leaves a "loophole for Communists."

He said that Robert S. Denham, general counsel for the NLRB, had informed the union in a letter that only officers of the joint executive board with which it and four other hotel and restaurant employes locals are affiliated are required to file non-Communist affidavits.

This provision, Hine declared, makes it possible for Communists to assume officers' posts in local unions without being subject to the Taft-Hartley law. He emphasized, however, that "we're not troubled with Communists."

Had the NLRB ruled that all local officers must file non-Communist affidavits, Hine said, it "would have helped us if we were ever confronted by the problem."

A spokesman for the NLRB said that local joint boards are required to file non-Communist affidavits instead of local union officers, where the board acts for the affiliated unions in handling NLRB matters.

Food Firm Employes To Seek Union Security

Production employes of four food cmopanies here yesterday voted unanimously to seek a union security clause in future agreements with the ir employers.

Frank W. Gibson, business agent for Warehousemen's Local No. 730, AFL, has requested the National Labor Relations Board to conduct four individual elections as authorized by the Taft-Hartley labor law, Gerhard Van Arkel, attorney for the local, said.

Under a union security clause, employes must become union members within 30 days after hiring.

The companies and the number of employes involved are Brentwood Egg Co., 34; Dwight Edwards Coffe Co, 19, and Fairfax Bread Co., 23, all division of Safeway Stores, Inc., and Garfield Food Co., 17, a division of Taylor Products Co.

2200 Army, Navy Doctors Eligible for Release Dec. 1

The Army and Navy announced yesterday that 2200 medical officers who were trained at Government expense during the war will become eligible for release December 1—several months ahead of schedule.

The order affects about 900 Navy "V-12 class" doctors who entered the service prior to May 1, 1946, and some 1300 nonvolunteer general duty Army medical officers who also entered prior to that date. They have been held in service until now due to the shortage of Army and Navy doctors.

Both services have urged the young doctors to apply for regular commissions or an additional year's active duty on a voluntary basis. In either case they become entitled to the $100 a month extra pay voted service doctors by the last Congress.

A string was attached to the release order. If enough of the doctors do not remain on voluntarily, the Army and Navy reserve the right to retain a sufficient number to keep the medical services up to minimum strength. But a survey indicates that this compulsion will not have to be applied.

2% Sales Tax Is Key Factor In Million D. C. Budget Hike

tax on all purchases, and says exemptions won't work.

Between the two theories is a cash difference estimated up to six million dollars a year for the District.

The Commissioners estimated the 2 per cent sales tax with exemptions would bring in nine million dollars a year—half that amount in the first fiscal year of operation.

Highest estimate for the revenue the District would get from a 2 per cent sales tax without exemptions was 15 million dollars a year.

Horan said that a sales tax "is the only answer to the fiscal problem of the District. Taxing real estate is not the answer because the area of the District is fixed."

He was asked whether it would be a good idea for the Commissioners to prepare a budget that would take a sales tax to finance.

"It's not good, but I don't know of any alternative that they have," said Horan. "There is a definite need to improve Washington's traffic facilities. Improved health facilities are being demanded and they will have to be paid for. School facilities have to be expanded. It all points to a need for added revenue."

Horan made clear the tax and budget problems of the District would be left to the regular session of Congress next year, and not touched in the special session.

The Commissioners' proposed District budget still is to be completed and sent to the Budget Bureau for inclusion in the President's budget message that goes to Congress in January.

Compliance on Red Affidavit Voted by Auto Workers' Union

guy," who has a big heart but who "makes his mistakes."

But on the other side, Murray pointedly gave substance to the Reuther faction charges that the opposition had been playing footsie with John L. Lewis, AFL mine workers' boss, and Murray's enemy number one.

Further, Murray made it very clear that Reuther's drive to obtain union compliance with the anti-Communist affidavit provisions of the new labor law was in no sense counter to official CIO policy.

Murray pointed out that at the recent CIO convention each individual union was given discretion to decide for itself whether it wanted to comply. Recognition was implicitly given to the problems of some unions, such as the auto workers, who might need the services of the National Labor Relations Board in certain cases.

Recourse to the board is denied to noncomplying unions.

Long Debate on Action

Debate on whether to comply occupied most of this afternoon's session. The Reuther group, looking to some 130 pending NLRB cases which would be thrown out if the union officers fail to execute the oaths, pleaded for compliance.

The resolution they favored denounced the new law with vigor, but urged compliance with the filing provisions, lest weaker locals be raided out of existence by rival groups.

Speakers pointed to the touch and go situations in the Glenn L. Martin aircraft plant near Baltimore, and the Ryan aircraft plant in California. There, UAW locals seek collective bargaining elections, but cannot obtain them until the international union officers have filed their affidavits.

Addes, Thomas and Leonard all took the floor in heated opposition, claiming that it was ridiculous to oppose the law and at the same time accede to its provisions.

Chorus of Boos

Last speaker against compliance was Harold L. Christoffel, honorary president of the notoriously left wing Allis-Chalmers local of the union. Wound up to a point where he found himself unable to stop, he exceeded his time limit and shouted for several minutes against a deafening chorus of boos until a sergeant at arms snatched the microphone away from him.

Christoffel is under indictment by a Federal grand jury on perjury charges. These stemmed from his denial before a congressional committee of any association or connection with the Communist Party.

When the vote came, the show of hands indicated a majority of at least four to one for compliance.

Murray's speech to the 2000 delegates of America's biggest union was about all that the Reuther majority could ask for. Observers here saw it as a further demonstration of Murray's growing isolation from left wing elements in the CIO.

First, he gave a hearty indorsement to Reuther, who for the last 18 months has been battling an opposition majority on his executive board and among the union's top officers.

Second, he declined to indorse those opposition officers.

Taft-Hartley Sanction

Third, he gave sanction to the propriety of Reuther's seeking compliance with the Taft-Hartley Act, thus pulling the rug from under opposition arguments to the effect that filing the affidavits violated official CIO policy.

Fourth, and most important, he inferentially supported the accuracy of the Reuther group's charges that the Addes-Leonard-Thomas faction, and the union left-wing locals, had been plotting with Lewis to steal away some auto union locals.

"I am told," he said, "that some people from outside your organization are trying to interfere and create division. I have read circulars and seen pictures.

"I am giving you a warning, see. Don't allow them to do that, no matter who they are. You keep them out, because the auto workers' business is the auto workers' business; it is not the business of Phil Murray or of John Lewis or of anybody else."

Stassen Leaves D. C. To 'Hunt' Delegates

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Former Gov. Harold E. Stassen, having unveiled his personal platform, takes off from Washington today on a 12-State tour which he yesterday called "a delegate-hunting trip—specifically, directly, frankly."

"We consider that we have a fighting chance," he said apropos of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Presidnet.

Stassen's platform was contained in a book, "Where I Stand," which was released yesterday as he held a news conference in the Statler.

In a foreword to his book, Stassen apperaed to be looking up Albany way as h ecalled for open discussion of vital issues.

"I doubt that coyness or clever evasion are accepted as qualities of leadership by the American people," he wrote.

This was in line with Stassen's earlier criticism of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, titular leader of the Republican Party and widely regarded as the No. 1 contender for the GOP nomination in '48.

In talking to reporters yesterday, Stassen repeated a previous estimate of his delegate strength—100 of the 130 delegates that are to represent the Dakotas, Iowa, Wisconsin, Missouri and Minnesota at the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia in June.

To win the nomination, a candidate will have to round up 547 delegates.

Stassen, 40-year-old former Governor of Minnesota and wartime aide to Admiral William F. (Bull) Halsey, leaves this morning for a tour that will take him to the Rocky Mountain area, and Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana and Florida in the South.

"Your trip, it is a delegate-hunting trip?"

"Yes; specifically, directly, frankly," said Stassen.

He was asked if he wasn't being bold in invading the Southland, generally regarded as "Taft territory."

Tells "How to Get Delegate"

"Well," said Stassen, "the basis of our entire campaign is to be very direct in presenting the issues and our candidacy to the people; and, of course, the delegates from the South will be an important factor at the next national convention. We are going down there to make a start."

"How do you get a delegate?" a reporter asked.

"It varies almost 1000 different ways for the thousand different delegates," Stassen said after an outburst of laughter. "Some places, you directly win them in primary elections; some places it is a matter of their own individual decision based on the program; sometimes it is a matter of their first choice not being available and their second choice not being available, and they finally come to you as third choice or fourth choice. There is no set pattern."

Stassen said he was seeking to be the second choice wherever, he was unable to be the first choice among delegates.

Taking off this morning, he plans to make the entire tour on a chartered plane of the United Airlines. A party of 15 aides and reporters will go along.

German Peace First on Reds' London List

London, Nov. 10 (AP).—Russia proposed today a five-point agenda for the Big Four Foreign Ministers conference, giving priority to the discussion of the controversial German peace terms over the problems of the Austrian treaty. The conference opens in London November 25.

The proposed agenda, offered by Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov through his deputy, was presented to the deputies who are drafting preliminary plans for the treaty talks. Thus far they have reached no major agreements in preliminary discussions.

"It looks as if the Foreign Ministers will take up just where they left off at Moscow," one informed American source said. He was referring to last spring's conference, which ended in a deadlock after the United States, Britain, Russia and France failed to agree mainly on the questions of establishing a central German government and reparations.

American informants said these five topics were presented by Russian Deputy Andrei Smirnov:

"1. Procedure for preparation of a German peace treaty.

"2. Form and scope of a provisional German political organization.

"3. Report of the control council on the implementation of the Moscow session of the Foreign Ministers' Council with regard to questions of demilitarization.

"4. Economic principles, level of postwar industry and a plan of reparations.

"5. Report of the commission on the Austrian treaty."

American sources attached some significance to the fact that Molotov left the Austrian treaty question at the end of the proposed agenda.

Va. Phone Firm Seeks Rate Hike

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—An application of the Harrisonburg Telephone Co. for rate increases in eight northwestern Virginia towns will be heard by the State Corporation Commission at 10 a. m. December 8.

The boosts, if granted, would apply to Harrisonburg, Dayton, Bridgewater, Broadway and Weyer's Cave on January 1 and to Elkton, McGaheysville and Grottoes as soon as installation of new dial service is completed.

C. Fred Switzer, president of the Harrisonburg phone company, noted in his petition that the company had not sought rate increases since 1921.

Under new rate schedules proposed private residential rates in Harrisonburg would go from $2.50 to $3.25 a month and four party residential from $2 to $2.50; private business rates would go from $4 to $5.25 and four party business rates from $3 to $4.

In Dayton, Bridgewater, Broadway and Weyer's Cave, the private residential rates would be boosted from $1.50 to $2.

Chiropractor Wounded, Woman Freed in Bond

Elkton, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—Dr. Anthony De Jesus Lopes, wounded Saturday with three bullets, was released from the hospital today, and Mrs. Jean Rankin Andrews was released from jail under $1000 bond on a charge of assault with intent to kill, Sheriff Elwood Boyd said today.

Boyd said the 27-year-old widow would be arraigned Thursday or Friday. Boyd said Mrs. Andrews told him Lopes, a 60-year-old chiropractor, threatened to kill her "apparently" because of "jealousy," and that she fired in self defense.

Stassen Expounds Program In Volume 'Where I Stand'

"Where I Stand," a 205-page statement of political and economic views by Harold E. Stassen, goes on sale at book counters Tuesday.

It is the first of the 1948 presidential campaign documents. Its author, by virtue of its contents, now has done more standing and more running for the Republican nomination than any of his rivals.

In its pages he stands for:

1. Three changes in the Taft-Hartley Act.

2. Twelve steps to combit communism at home.

3. A top limit of 50 per cent on income taxes, coupled with a 1½ per cent annual levy on idle capital.

4. A housing campaign based on public construction and private operation.

5. Insurance to cover medical costs of more than $250 a year.

6. Aids to small business through taxes, simplified regulation, decentralized government, consolidated collective bargaining and antitrust actions.

7. A system of freedom as distinguished from centralized controls of communism and socialism.

Differs With Ball on Points

The Minnesota Republican lays down a middle-of-the-road labor program in which he expresses opposition to economic domination by either industry or labor, regretfully notes differences with Senator Joseph H. Ball, and calls for some alterations in the Taft-Hartley Act, which has his general approval. He would amend the restraints on olitical activity by unions, abolish the requirement that labor leaders take a non-Communist oath, eliminate requirement of an election preliminary to validation of existing union shop contracts.

To combat Communism, Stassen recommends that the country do 12 things: (1) expose identity of Communists; (2) make them stand up and be counted; (3) prosecute them for law violations; (4) give workers the facts; (5) meet the issues Communists raise; (6) move to correct evils they point out; (7) expose unsound recommendations they make; (8) urge non-Communists to refuse association with Communists; (9) make no charges of "communism" without evidence; (10) ban Communists from public pay rolls, Federal, State or local; (11) insure secret ballot for unions so that Communist union officials can be removed; (12) respect civil liberties and legal rights fully in any action taken.

Wants Income to Create Capital

The tax program Stassen advocates starts from the premise that "the Federal Government in times of peace should not take more than 50 per cent of the income of any American." He blames rates that now take up to 90 per cent as obstructions to a "dynamic capitalism." He asserts that "new investments are more important to the future of the United States than the comparatively small amount of taxes which the country obtains by running the rates to exorbitant levels." To smoke out idle capital Stassen would levy a tax of 1½ per cent on the principal of fortunes in excess of certain fixed amounts. Under Stassen's proposals the tax rate also would be used to curb deflation and inflation. Rates would be cut when unemployment rose to more than 6 per cent of the labor force. They would rise with recovery.

Author Stassen is pretty rough in dealing with "Washington's" handling of housing for veterans. He lambastes the country for letting veterans sleep in shelters that an Oakie would shun. He blames mishandling of Government controls on building materials for some of the trouble. His remedy is Federal expenditure of a billion dollars a year for giant housing projects under which the Government would acquire sites, let bids or undertake cost-plus construction and then sell housing to highest bidders. Half would be sold to cooperatives and half to private operators. He would have as many as 25,000 units in a project for mass production economy.

Socialism Like Communism

Federal-State health insurance that would take care of medical costs in excess of $250 a year is Stassen's health program. He would otherwise leave medical care to expansion of such voluntary plans as the Blue Cross Commission of the American Hospital Association.

Stassen would aid small business by lowering taxes on the first portion of net income, permitting small enterprise to build up reserves, simplifying Government regulation, reducing the number of bargaining agencies with which small businessmen must negotiate for labor contracts, by decentralizing Government administration of Federal laws, by tightening up antitrust enforcement.

"Individual economic freedom is inseparable from true individual social, civil, and religious freedom," Stassen asserts in amplifying his general philosophy of government. He thinks it unsound to speak of "backing socialism versus communism" and believes them "two peas from the same confining pod." (His definition of "socialism," ventured orally in the press conference at which he presented his book, is limited in application. Yugoslavia is the only country in Europe that fits it.)

An Optimist on Peace

Extracts from the Senate hearings on the Taft Hartley bill, from a speech at Topeka, Kansas on small business, and from a magazine article on his interview with Stalin are included in the book. In the comments on Russia, Stassen reaffirms his optimistic hope for peace, declaring:

"I believe that peace and cooperation between Russia and the United States are possible. For all our differences, our grave mutual suspicions, war is not inevitable. Wars between powers are inevitable only when one or both of the powers makes up its mind that war is inevitable. I don't think Russia believes at this time that war with us is inevitable."

Labor Moves to Curb Lords

London, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—The Labor Government, opening a grave constitutional fight in the midst of the economic crisis, formally moved in Commons today that the power of the House of Lords be curbed.

Not content with this, groups of Commons members were waiting to demand (1) that the hereditary principle of Lords membership be abolished; (2) that members of the Lords be elected, and abolished altogether.

(3) that the upper house be

Deputy Prime Minister Herbert Morrison opened a two-day debate by moving the vital stage—the second reading—of the labor bill to reduce from two years to one the length of time by which the heavily conservative Lords may delay legislation by voting against it.

In raising the question now, despite violent Conservative objections, the Labor Government was determined to prevent the Lords from killing th remainder of its nationalization program and especially its proposal to nationalize the iron and steel industries.

The government does not want to introduce the iron and steel bill this year partly because of the socialistic nature of the measure at a time when Britain seeks help from the United States.

If it puts off the bill until next fall, the Lords with their present power could kill it by holding it up until the general election scheduled for the summer of 1950.

Gambling Blamed In Violent Crimes

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—Asserting that at least one of a series of violent crimes in Washington County had a background of "big time" gambling, Judge Joseph D. Mish today asked that information on gambling be brought before the November grand jury.

Judge Mish said recent months have seen an outbreak of crimes in the county, including several attitude on the part of the grand murders. He called for a militant jury and law enforcement officers in order that "this nefarious business may be driven from our midst."

Charles Taylor, 45, Hagerstown, was alleged to have been slain last July in an argument over a gambling debt.

Chief to Face Trial Board

drunk on duty at two fires. Chief Murphy has denied the charges.

Defense Not Included

The corporation counsel's office report does not include any defense by the chief since it covered interviews only with persons listed by Captain Conroy.

Daniel B. Maher, special assistant corporation counsel, was designated by the Commissioners to study the 700-page report on the investigation and prepare the charges.

Maher, a former assistant United States attorney, was sworn in to the newly created post yesterday at 10 a. m. in the office of Commissioner John Russell Young. At that time he told reporters he had "no idea" what his projects would be.

A half hour later, as the Commissioners began considering the controversial Murphy case at their semiweekly meeting, he got his answer.

Requested by Murphy

The action by the Commissioners came in response to a request made by Martin F. O'Donoghue, attorney for the chief, for such a hearing. O'Donoghue handed the request letter to the Commissioners as photographers were completing the shooting of the swearing-in ceremony.

O'Donoghue's letter declared that because of the widespread publicity on the investigation made by the corporation counsel's office, he recommended "that a trial board be convened of three laymen of the District of Columbia for the hearing of these charges."

The attorney also requested the Commissioners to furnish him with a copy of the report which he said he "understood" he would "duly receive." The Commissioners did not take action on forwarding of the report.

Is Happy, Chief Says

When informed of the Commissioners' action, Chief Murphy said "That's okay by me. I'm happy they accepted my attorney's recommendation."

Fire Capt. Joseph W. Conroy, whose charges set off the investigation, declined to comment on the development, although his attorney, William J. Rowan, hailed it as concurrence in a request made earlier by him and his client.

Rowan said, "Several months ago we requested an investigation and at that time asked for appointment of three civilians, outside the Fire or Police Department. The Commissioners are doing precisely what we had asked for. Strangely enough, Mr. O'Donoghue and I are in accord."

believes that these cases present questions of outstanding importance, not only because of the nature of the constitutional and legal questions involved, but also because of the impact which the decisions will have upon the lives and well-being of millions of Americans. The court is called upon in these cases to decide questions as to the scope of the Federal Bill of Rights, as to the application of laws which the Congress has enacted to implement the Constitution, and as to the proper role of the judiciary in safeguarding the fundamental civil rights secured by the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

Brief to be Presented

"The Government is of the view that judicial enforcement of racial restrictive covenants is contrary to the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution, is in violation of specific provisions of the Civil Rights Act, and is contrary to the public policy of the United States."

The department's reasons for these views will be given at length in a brief that is now being written, the motion added. To help the court further in its study of the racial issues, Clark and Pearlman asked to be heard for one hour when the cases are argued.

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court yesterday added a new issue to its racial docket, agreeing to decide whether Oklahoma must admit a Negro girl to the State University law school.

Ada Lois Sipuel graduated at Langston University, the Oklahoma State Negro college, and tried to enter the University of Oklahoma. She had all the credits she needed, but she was turned down because she was a Negro. University officials pointed to the State law, which makes it a crime to admit white students to Negro schools or Negroes to white schools.

Out-of-State Scholarships

Oklahoma gives out-of-State law scholarships to Negro students, but has no law school for them. Miss Sipuel told the Supreme Court this system denied her the equal protection of the laws, and was against the fourteenth amendment.

The State claims she never made a formal request for law schooling equal to that given white students, adding that if she did so she would surely get it. Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson said Miss Sipuel seemed more interested in breaking the Oklahoma system of separate schools for whites and Negroes than in learning law.

official, "did we know the company had changed its mind about discrimination."

PHA made it clear that as a lessee it had no authority to determine building operation policy.

R. L. Boaman, district manager for the Whelan stores in this area, stated that any promises to operate without racial segregation were "made without authority from the company." Boaman said the two persons reported to have made such pledges "are no longer associated with this company."

Henry W. DeLagarde, president of the housing branch of the United Public Workers of America, and one of the spokesmen for the demonstrators, declared:

"The Whelan Company has gone back on its promise to serve all persons here, without discrimination. This means our people will have to eat in the parks."

Among the group who protested the policy were employes of the PHA and the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. PHA occupies the top seven floors of the building, while FAA offices take up the other floors. Both agencies have many non-white employes.

torpedoed sailors came three split decisions.

Justice Frankfurter spoke for five of the court in holding that a farmer who buys crop insurance from the Government must keep track of the insurance rules in the Federal Register. This ruling cost A. A. and N. D. Merrill, of Bonneville County, Idaho, $3960 insurance on a crop of spring wheat they lost in the dry weather of July, 1945.

"An absurdity," said Jackson of the majority decision. If farmers did read the Register to make sure of their rights, he added, they would need no crop insurance, because reading that thick, dull publication, he said, would leave them no time to plant any crops. Douglas joined in this dissent. Black and Rutledge dissented, too, without giving any reasons.

Murphy, Reed, Burton and Chief Justice Vinson joined Frankfurter in the majority opinion. They agreed that the ruling was hard on the Merrills, who bought and paid for their crop insurance in good faith. But the majority found that just the same the Merrills could not be paid, because their claim was barred by a clause in the rules that were printed in the Federal Register, although the clause was not in the application that was sent to the Merrills.

The court also:

Ruled 7 to 2 that farmers need not pay interest on penalties imposed for raising more than their quotas;

Ruled 6 to 3 that the International Salt Co. broke the Federal law by making people who leased its sale machines—which are patented—buy International salt—which is not;

Refused to hear the appeal of the Michigan Fraternal Order of Police, who complained that Detroit fired policemen who joined;

To Act on Secondary Boycott

Took up the appeal on the AFL teamsters union against a Colorado court order stopping a secondary boycott. When the teamsters were trying to organize dairies near Denver, dairy workers refused to handle milk hauled by nonunion teamsters;

Agreed to hear the claim of Fontaine Le Maistre that he has a right to redeem his land which was sold for taxes in Lee County, Florida, while he was in the Navy during the war. He lost in the State courts;

Refused to help California cloth-ing makers, who claimed three New York firms were muscling in on the West Coast trade by labeling their output "California;"

Agreed to hear a longshoremen's overtime pay case, which the Justice Department said might caught cause much unrest. The United States Court of Appeals in New York gave the overtime to longshhore there, and hundred of like claims have been made by dock workers in other cities.

Md. Man Held As Lottery 'King'

Frmederick, Md., Nov. 10.—Police today booked a Hagerstown man on a charge of operating a lottery here and announced he was a "kingpin" in a numbers racket.

Lieut. Reno Six identified him as Waverly C. Clark. He was released in $1000 bond for jury trial next February.

Clark was arrested Saturday as the followup of a routine arrest of a Negro charged with smashing a store window, Six said.

The Negro told police he smashed the window to get back at a store owner who refused to buy his small safe. He said the safe belcng to Clark.

Lieut. Six said the man turned out to be a "runner" collecting numbers bets. Police asked Clark for the combination of the safe and found it cotnained numbers and names of bettors inside, Six said.

Md. Welfare Positions For Negroes Advocated

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—Governor Lane was asked today in a letter from the Baltimore Urban League to appoint Negroes to the State Board of Welfare, and to the various county welfare boards, to acquaint officials "with the needs and viewpoint of the Negro community."

League Secretary Alexander J. Allen said that although the welfare board serves thousands of Negro families, there is no Negro on any of the county boards.

Band Leader of Colts Sentenced for Thefts

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—Gay A. Rimert, band leader for the Baltimore Colts professoinal football team, received a suspended sentence of 18 months in the Maryland House of Correction today for the theft of musical instruments and improper insurance collections on band instruments which the defendant had sold.

Criminal Court Judge Michael J. Manley released Rimert under two years' probation. The band leader pleaded nolo contendere.

Revised Bridge-Tunnel Plan For Chesapeake Bay Offered

Governor Lane of Maryland and Mayor D'Alesandro of Baltimore presented a revised plan to the Army yesterday for construction of a bridge or tunnel across the Chesapeake Bay.

The two officials took to the Pentagon a revised draft of a Federal bill to authorize the project and a brief urging Army approval. Army Secretary Royall submitted the plan to the Office of the Chief of Engineers for study after conferring with them briefly.

The proposed legislation would amend a bill now pending in Congress, to some details of which the Army has objected.

It provides for a bridge or tunnel reaching from Anne Arundel County, at or near Sandy Point, to Kent Island, in the vicinity of Stevensville.

Both Senate Bill 1553 and the Lane-D'Alesandro proposal submitted yesterday would authorize construction of a bridge or tunnel across the Patapsco River in Baltimore as well as provide for spanning the bay. Their plan, as submitted yesterday, would:

1. Renew lapsed authority granted by Congress in 1938 to carry through the bay and Baltimore project. Congress then authorized Maryland to build bridges or tunnels across the Chesapeake and Patapsco, and bridges across the Potomac and Susquehanna Rivers. The later was constructed.

2. Permit tolls from the Potomac and Susquehanna River bridges to be pledged as security for bonds to be issued to finance the Chesapeake Bay and Patapsco River projects.

This was contemplated by Congress in passing the 1938 Act, it was said. The proposed new projects cannot be successfully financed in any other way, it was added.

3. Permit the State of Maryland to fix tolls for use of Chesapeake Bay and Patapsco River bridges or tunnels and pledge those tolls as security for payment of any bonds which may be issued to finance any other project now or later authorized by the State.

4. Preserve the Secretary of the Army's existing control over the Potomac and Susquehanna River bridges and require adjustments of tolls on those bridges and on either or both of the other two projects so as to amortise the cost of the entire group within 40 years after completion of the last one.

Governor Lane said the redraft of the bill answers the Army's objections to the proposed application of tolls.

The proposed Chesapeake Bay bridge would cost an estimated 30 to 31½ millions and take about 30 months to build. Nearly 5 miles long, it would be the fourth longest bridge in the world.

China Garrison Holding Off 100,000 Reds

Peiping, Nov. 10 (AP).—The heaviest fighting of the civil war in China proper roared today around the railway junction of Shihkiachwang, where government warplanes and a hard-pressed garrison held an estimated 100,000 attacking Communists at bay.

Latest government dispatches from the town, 172 miles by rail southwest of Peiping, said the Communists repeatedly reached the ancient walls, only to be hurled back.

An emergency airfield inside the town was reported completed to replace the regular field captured by the Communists, but Red artillery fire blasted into it and there was no word whether planes were attempting to use it.

The air force, unopposed in the air, made repeated sorties from bases around Peiping, bombing and strafing in the most concentrated aerial operations of the two-year war. Plane sorties were said to be totaling as high as 250 a day.

Partial Text of Marshall Statement to Congress Groups

A partial text of Secretary Marshall's statement to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee follows:

CONGRESS will wish to go into the objectives and the details of the European recovery program at some length, but I feel that a brief summary of the tentative conclusions we have reached may serve the useful purpose of making clear the distinction between the long-range recovery program and the stop-gap program, which we refer to as an interim aid.

GEORGE C. MARSHALL, Secretary of State, in testimony before a joint meeting of the Senate and House Foreign Committees yesterday, asked Congress to provide $597,000,000 for emergency aid to Europe until March 31. He estimated another 7.5 billion dollars will be needed in the 15 months starting then

LONG-TERM EUROPEAN RECOVERY PROGRAM

The Committee of European Economic Cooperation, meeting in Paris, produced a recovery program extending over four years. After the most careful checking, with the assistance of experts drawn from many governmental agencies, we have concluded that the Paris report correctly identifies the courses of action necessary to produce recovery and indicates an approximate order of magnitude of the cost for the full four-year program. On the basis of the present indications, the estimated cost to our Treasury of this program may be of the order of magnitude of 16 to 20 billion dollars. We feel, however, that the uncertainties of weather and crops, supply availabilities, prices, et cetera, inject a degree of assumption which makes the total cost impossible to forecast with accuracy at this time. I therefore will not recommend to the President that the Congress appropriate for the full four-year period.

I feel, however, that we can estimate with reasonable accuracy and assurance the sum required for the first stage of the recovery program, which will cover a 15-month period from April 1, 1948, to June 30, 1949.

Our tentative estimate of the cost, subject to final checks in the light of the Harriman Report, is something under 1.5 billions for the last three months of the fiscal year 1948 and somewhat less than 6 billions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949.

The findings contained in the Krug Report, the Nourse Report, and the Harriman Report, together with the studies made by our interdepartmental committees, make it clear that a program in this order of magnitude can be safely undertaken by this country. I shall therefore recommend to the President that the United States support the European Recovery Program and that an amount be appropriated for the 15-month period ending June 30, 1949.

It is of cardinal importance that an able and effective United States administration manage the funds which may be made available by the Congress. How best to achieve this and the other essential elements of an organizational and administrative structure for the program of aid to European recovery is a matter which the Congress will wish to examine with great care.

There are several important principles which I believe should determine the nature of this organization:

a. The operation of this program will in many ways define and express the foreign policy of the United States in the eyes of the European countries and the world. Therefore, the operation must fully accord with the foreign policy of the President as expressed through the Secretary of State.

b. The organization, if it is to afford successful and dynamic management to the complex recovery program, must be granted the widest practicable flexibility both in its operations and in the use of the funds placed at its disposal. The program of United States support will achieve its objective only if it is kept responsive to changing situations and varying supply conditions.

c. Full use should be made of the existing governmental agencies in carrying out those parts of the program which fall within the scope of their present activities. The Departments of Commerce, Treasury, Agriculture, Interior, the National Military Establishment and other agencies are well equipped to perform many of the necessary functions. The National Advisory Council and other competent interdepartmental agencies will have important parts to play.

d. Strong central administrative direction is essential in a complex and varied program of this kind. There must be a high degree of integration in our operation, both in the United States and overseas. Unity of command, rather than diffusion of authority and responsibility is required.

THE PRESIDENT will submit to the Congress his recommendations concerning the administration of the European Recovery Program.

There will be important functions for the United States to perform in Europe. Much of this work will be negotiation with governments of a nature constituting essentially an extension of the conduct of the entire relationship of the United States with the participating countries. Such matters are now handled through our embassies and legations and clearly should continue to be. There will be certain additional functions arising directly out of the operating program, such as screening of specific import requirements, arrangements for furnishing technical assistance and other similar specialized activities which will require the appointment of qualified men who can devote their full attention to such matters. These men in their dealings with participating governments should work through our ambassadors because it is essential to maintain a single channel of responsibility for United States negotiations with other governments.

For general coordination of the operations in Europe and for central representation in the continuing European organization which the participating countries have decided to establish, consideration should be given to the designation of a special United States representative for the European Recovery Program, with ambassadorial rank, appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.

As a general principle, aid should take the form of grants or loans, depending in each case upon the capacity of the particular country to repay and the effect which accumulation of additional external debt would have upon sustained recovery. The precise determination in each case should be made by the administrative agency with the advice of the Department of State and the National Advisory Council.

In practice it is felt that, where need is clearly demonstrated and where repayment cannot reasonably be expected, imports of supplies which are quickly consumed, such as food, fertilizer and fuel, of indispensable items of capital equipment for immediate replacement and repair, and of essential raw materials should be financed by means of grants. Loans should be made to cover imports of capital equipment and raw materials which will directly produce the means of repayment and where such repayment can reasonably be expected.

At the same time every encouragement should be given to early initiation of private financing so as to eliminate as far as possible the necessity for direct assistance from the United States Government. Use should also be made of the resources of the International Bank whenever in the opinion of the bank the necessary and appropriate conditions for loans can be met.

It is obvious that the basic responsibility for European recovery rests on the European countries themselves. However, this Government must have assurance that the aid it provides is effectively utilized for the achievement of European recovery as rapidly as possible.

IT IS contemplated that, to this end, bilateral agreements will be negotiated between the United States and each of the countries participating in the recovery program, setting forth the reciprocal undertaking relating to American assistance. These agreements will vary in form and content as between countries, depending upon the nature of the aid to be furnished and the conditions deemed important in each case.

The commitments should include undertakings to adopt monetary, fiscal and other measures to maintain stability in price and cost structures; to develop production to reach targets set by the participating countries and in particular, to increase the production of coal and basic foods; and to cooperate in reducing barriers to trade and promoting increased interchange of goods and services. Many other points and more detailed provisions to be covered in the agreements will be presented and discussed during the hearings.

Assistance to Europe will, to a considerable extent, take the form of commodities. The proposal to be submitted to the Congress contemplates the use of funds provided under the program for purchases outside the United States of commodities not readily available in sufficient quantities in this country. This country will tend to protect our home economy against inflationary price movements which might result from concentrated buying in our markets. It seems clearly in our interest that the greatest possible amount of these supplies be obtained for Europe from other countries. Such countries should be encouraged to contribute directly as much as they can to the recovery program through grants-in-aid or by extending credits for exports to Europe.

[The Secretary went on to say that the European recovery program would also help non-European countries, directly and indirectly.

[The dollar problems of the rest of the Western Hemisphere would be met partly by direct dollar purchases of goods Europe needs, and partly by "normal Export-Import Bank transactions." As for China, a "definite proposal is under preparation for early submission" to give economic aid.

[He said the whole foreign economic program "menaces no one" and is intended only to end foreign dependence upon American aid.]

INTERIM AID PROGRAM

I HAVE gone at some length into the major features of the long-range plan for European reconstruction and the part that the United States can prudently and wisely contribute because I fully realize that the speedy and adequate consideration of the interim-aid program which will be the first item of business presented to you cannot be dealt with by the Congress without understanding its relationship to the program of long-range reconstruction of Europe.

I would, however, urge upon you the necessity of a speedy decision in regard to the interim-aid program. What is immediately needed is aid to maintain the status quo in food and in the material necessary to keep the wheels turning and people at work.

It will do little good to discuss the merits of a recovery program for Europe if in the meantime political and economic conditions have deteriorated to a point where such a program could not possibly succeed. The problem of overseas payment has become particularly acute in the case of Austria, France and Italy. It is clear that the people of these countries in the absence of immediate assistance will, during the next few months, begin to suffer from a lack of food and other necessities of life and the whole economic and social life of the people will be seriously affected. Within a short time these countries will have exhausted all the flow of essential supplies.

Austria, whose economy is carrying the weight of a military occupation of four powers, has been able to survive in recent months largely through the assistance rendered to her under the United States foreign-relief program. These funds will be exhausted shortly after the beginning of the year. The dollar resources of France will permit her to procure essential food and fuel from abroad only until the end of December. Because of her rapidly dwindling reserves, she took steps at the end of August to reduce sharply the placement of contracts for most other imports.

Italy's financial situation is even more serious than that of Austria or France. Last June the Italian government took steps to eliminate the purchase of most of the raw materials and supplies which she required for the operation of her economy. The United States foreign-relief program has been able to provide food and coal until the present time. Funds are not in sight, however, beyond the first of December to maintain the flow of these necessary commodities.

In order to meet this emergency, I recommend that you give immediate and urgent consideration to a bill authorizing the appropriation of sufficient funds to provide the supplies necessary to permit the people of these three countries to continue to eat, to work, and to survive the winter. This is not a recovery program. It is designed to help provide the essentials of existence to the people of these three countries.

TO ACCOMPLISH this purpose it is recommended that the Congress authorize an appropriation of 597 million dollars. Of this amount Austria needs 42 million, France needs 328 million and Italy needs 227 million dollars. These funds should be sufficient to meet the situation until March 31, 1948, before which time we hope that some decision may have been taken by the Congress regarding a broad recovery program.

In the absence of a recovery program the problem of maintaining existing levels in Europe rapidly becomes more complex after March 31. Additional countries will by that time practically have exhausted their dollar resources, and the cumulative effect of the uncertainties as to the future and the continued low levels of production and consumption will have serious consequences throughout Europe.

The program of interim aid would be concentrated largely on such items as food, fuel, fertilizer, fibers, seeds and medical supplies. With such resources as they can make available, the countries should be able themselves to procure other imports needed to prevent economic deterioration. The program should be sufficiently flexible to take account of such changes in requirements and availabilities as may occur.

Interim aid should be given to these countries under agreement to make efficient use of the commodities which we would supply. The bilateral agreements would also require that the local curency equivalent of the value of the commodities which we supply would be used only for such purposes as we and the recipient country might agree. They should also include a provision that the receiving government make known to its people the purpose and source of our supplies, and that it would make available full information concerning their distribution and use.

The operation of a program of the type which is proposed can be handled expeditiously by existing agencies of the Government. The procedures and machinery which are being used in the current relief program have been set up in accordance with the relief bill enacted last summer.

The urgency of the situation is so great that I recommend that no new agency be set up to handle this interim program. The time required to organize such an agency, to hire personnel and establish new procedures would defeat its very purpose. Whatever agency might be created to administer the long-term European Recovery Program could, of course, take over the operation of interim aid as soon as it comes into existence.

There is one further element with respect to interim needs. It is my understanding that the Department of the Army will be presenting certain additional requirements for funds for occupied areas above the present appropriations available for this purpose during the current fiscal year. I am told that these will be on the general order of 500 million dollars, of which slightly more than 300 million dollars will be for additional requirements in western Germany.

I have endeavored to present in broad outline the long-range European Recovery Program and, in somewhat more detail, the Interim Aid Program. The proposals will be presented in full to your respective committees.

CONCLUSION

IN CONSIDERING them I know you are aware of the momentous importance to the world of your decisions. While we are dealing at the moment with the drab though vital facts of economic life, they carry with them fateful consequences.

The automatic success of the program cannot be guaranteed. The imponderables are many. The risks are real. They are, however, risks which have been carefully calculated, and I believe the chances of success are good. There is convincing evidence that the people of western Europe want to preserve their free society and the heritage we share with them. To make that choice conclusive they need our assistance. It is in the American tradition to help. In helping them we will be helping ourselves—because in the larger sense our national interests coincide with those of a free and prosperous Europe.

We must not fail to meet this inspiring challenge. We must not permit the free community of Europe to be extinguished. Should this occur it would be a tragedy for the world. It would impose incalculable burdens upon this country and force serious readjustments in our traditional way of life. One of our important freedoms—freedom of choice in both domestic and foreign affairs would be drastically curtailed.

Whether we like it or not, we find ourselves, our Nation, in a world position of vast responsibility. We can act for our own good by acting for the world's good.

"What this country amounts to depends on what happens to its homes."... That's why the life insurance companies and their agents are bringing you this series of messages from the nation's foremost authorities, to help you plan for happiness in the handling of your family money. (This is Message Number 25.)

The BUNDLE FROM HEAVEN that came C.O.D.!

A baby is one of the greatest joys in life . . . but be sure to arrange your budget so you will have the money ready when the little one arrives!

by HAZEL CORBIN, Director Maternity Center Association in New York

HAZEL CORBIN

WHEN Mr. and Mrs. A. C. of this city (real names withheld) came to see us recently, they were worried for fear they couldn't afford everything necessary for their baby's safe arrival.

The common-sense advice we gave them should be just as helpful to other expectant parents:

We told them that maternity care comes in different grades like anything else you buy. The important thing to do is get the best medical, hospital, and nursing care within the power of your pocketbook and your hospital insurance plan.

Try to choose your doctor from among those in your community who have training and experience in baby-bringing. He'll tell you the importance of good medical care before and after the baby arrives as well as during the actual delivery.

Determine Expenses—Then Save

Find out on that first visit to the doctor what his bill and your other expenses will be. Then plan to set aside enough money every month to pay these various bills when they come due.

"So you're my new family! Hello!"

If you're going to a hospital, make sure the doctor you choose takes you to one which provides the simple but very essential safeguards necessary. In all good hospitals the kind of accommodations you reserve do not affect the medical standards of your care, only the extras.

Or if you're going to have your baby at home, plan in your baby budget to have a well-trained nurse for a few days and then the visiting nurse can carry on. In any case, be sure to plan for some capable help around the house for about six weeks after your baby comes. Maybe Aunt Susie, or Grandma, or the proud Father! Let them help take the burden of housekeeping off your shoulders.

Another item: baby's clothes and accessories should be simple—but they will cost something and should be saved for. A baby in a simple dress is more beautiful than if it is all camouflaged and beribboned. And it's less work for Mother!

And remember—the parents who give their baby the best start in life, are those who confide in each other, and together arrange its future.

How to PLAN for Family Happiness

• Planning for a baby's arrival is only part of sound money planning. You'll be more likely to have enough money on hand when you need it, if you'll follow these few simple rules:

FOR TODAY... The first thing, for most families, is to take care of the larger fixed items such as rent, taxes, insurance, mortgage and installment payments, etc.

So start by adding up all your fixed items for the year, divide by 52, and set aside that amount weekly.

Also every family should have a "rainy day" fund equal to at least four weeks' income. Set aside a little every week until you have that much. Then, you'll know how much you can spend for food, clothing, heat, light, amusements, and so forth.

FOR TOMORROW... We live in a changing world. Family needs and circumstances change . . . living costs . . . taxes. If you have not had your life insurance program reviewed lately, the chances are 2 to 1 that it should be brought up to date.

There are so many ways in which you can use your life insurance, that you should have the life insurance you now own checked to see if it is suited to your needs. This is a service that comes with your life insurance.

The person best equipped to help you with this is the well-trained life insurance agent. Get in touch with your agent, or write your life insurance company. INSTITUTE OF LIFE INSURANCE, 60 East 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y.

N. Y. State Seeks to Curb Crime Books

Waving sexy crime magazines at the judges, New York State counsel yesterday told the Supreme Court there was no freedom of press for "such trash."

Freedom—the State claimed is only for books and papers that are educational, that discuss topics of public importance.

"You don't think discussion of crime is of public importance?" Justice Rutledge drawled.

Waves Stack of Books

"Not these," replied Prosecutor Whitman Knapp, shaking a stack of issues of a magazine. They carried pieces—with pictures—about love cults and white slave rings, about rob-rackets and people being put on the spot.

The court was hearing the magazine case for the third time. Twice before the justices could not agree about the validity of a New York law against selling books and papers that deal mostly with bloodshed, lust and crime. Barely mentioned in the arguments was Murray Winters, a New York dealer, who was fined $100 five years ago for having the magazines in his shop.

Arthur N. Seiff, counsel for Winters, told the court the magazine stories were much like Sherlock Holmes.

Holmes Always Right

"As I remember it," said Justice Jackson, "Sherlock Holmes always came out on top."

Seiff said crime never paid in the detective magazines, that the editors made a point of this; that the criminals always were caught.

Seiff was questioned at length by Justice Frankfurter.

But Prosecutor Knapp was questioned more when he came up with his notion that the First Amendment does not protect what is written for entertainment.

Jackson said what, then, would give him the right to have stories by Guy de Maupassant, who wrote much of crooks and low types.

Knapp said it would come under the Fifth Amendment—which protects property—but not the first—which protects the free press.

Cites Dickens' Novels

Jackson recalled that Charles Dickens' novels brought about reform of the laws of England. Knapp said novels might enjoy freedom of the press, if they were instructive as well as entertaining.

Knapp pointed out that a New York grand jury lately was urged to act against a sexy poem, and Justice Black asked him how William Shakespeare's Venus and Adonis would stand in New York. Knapp didn't know the poem, he said. Anyway, he added, there was a difference between classics and trash.

"After all," Frankfurter murmured, "what is trash to one generation may be a classic to the next."

The case has been in the Supreme Court more than two years, and probably will not be resolved until the justices have considered it for several months more.

Nazi Victims To Get Back Lost Property

Berlin, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—The American Military Government today put into effect a law designed to return an estimated $1,400,000,000 in properties to swindled Nazi victims.

The AMG promulgated the law after the German legislature in the American zone failed to enact it.

The law calls for restitution of properties lost "through transactions under duress, arising from discrimination because of race, religion, nationality, ideology and political opposition to National Socialism."

Theodore H. Ball, AMG finance chief, said his property control office was holding 19,000 properties valued at about $1,400,000,000 for return to rightful owners. He estimated between 80 and 90 per cent of the claimants were Jews.

The official announcement said the law applies only to the American zone and American-controlled Bremen. It does not include properties in Berlin, for which further legislation is planned.

The French were reported ready to announce a similar law and the British were working on one. Soviet plans were not known.

A. J. Rockwell, chief of the military government legal branch, said the law does not cover losses sustained through bombings or bank accounts taxed by central government laws. It does mean restoration of real estate, businesses, works of art and valuables which victims of Nazi oppression lost in Germany from January 30, 1933, to May 8, 1945, he said.

Utah Protests in High Court On Appeals in Polygamy Case

It's a crime to agree to preach that it is right for a man to have more than one wife, Utah State counsel told the Supreme Court yesterday.

Before the court was the appeal from jail terms of a year apiece of 32 fundamentalists—who are said both to believe and to practice plural marriage.

However, the 32 were not jailed polygamy. They were jailed for conspiring to preach it, under a Utah law against conspiring to do anything harmful to the public health r morals, or to trade or commerce or to obstruct justice.

Calvin L. Rampton, assistant attorney general of Utah, said it would be for a jury to say whether an act was harmful.

Justice Jackson observed that he would be in some doubt whether he was breaking this law, as he might not be sure what a jury would think harmful.

Jackson said he could see no use in having other criminal laws, if a State had that one, as it covered everything one can think of. "If it is valid," Jackson added, "the courts might as well drop the doctrine that a law must define the crime it is meant to punish."

Defense Counsel Claude T. Barnes of Salt Lake City said if the court upheld the jail terms, it would have taken on the job of custodian of people's thoughts and would be in for a busy time.

1947 Housing Construction To Near Peak

Housing completion this year will reach an estimated 85 to 90 per cent of previous peak production, according to Thomas S. Holden, president of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, construction reports firm.

In a talk at the tenth anniversary luncheon of the Washington Building Congress at the Hotel Mayflower yesterday, Holden defended the American construction industry against a charge of "backwardness" which he said has been reiterated by "so-called housing experts, facile journalists and radio commentators."

Answering those who compare construction with the automobile industry, he said passenger auto production this year will be 75 to 80 per cent of its previous peak. The would-be car purchaser, he declared, is currently promised delivery in 12 to 14 months if he orders a Ford and 8 to 10 months if it is a Buick.

While purchasers of new houses have had to pay premium prices, he continued, these "were not charged in any dealer's markup, but in the scores of excess cost items that the builder has to pay in the shortage market."

A former president of the Washington Building Congress, Holden said abuses most frequently criticized are only partly of the industry's making, and consist mainly of "monopolistic or uneconomic practices at the local level." Among these he named "immunities of labor unions from antitrust prosecution, licensing laws and laws restricting or regulating bidding practices, and local building codes."

The speaker said Americans have rejected most of what he termed "socialistic programs" offered "under the guise of national economic planning." He said he believed the "planners who tried to perpetuate OPA, the ones who tried in 1946 a vast Government housing program and conspicuously failed with it, and the ones who have recently concocted a new synthetic crisis out of the Marshall Plan and the current price inflation" are in full retreat.

Holden, who was the speaker at the first dinner of the Building Congress in November, 1937, was introduced yesterday by Theodore I. Coe, first president of the local group, who acted as master of ceremonies. John G. Scharf, president, announced to the more than 500 present that the huge birthday cake on the head table would be sent to the Children's Hospital.

Cattle, Butter, Egg Prices Hold As Hogs, Grains Close Lower

By The Associated Press

Beef cattle, eggs and butter yesterday clung to their high price levels in the wholesale markets, but the prices of wheat, corn and oats, and other meat animals slumped.

A new retail price increase for bread was reported at Bethlehem, Pa., where 1-pound loaves went up 1 cent to 16 cents and the cost of larger loaves and rolls was boosted.

Wheat futures closed ¼ to 1½ cents lower at Chicago, December delivery $2.96¼ to ½ a bushel. Corn was 1½ to 1¾ cents lower, December $2.32 3/8 to ¼, and oats were ¾ to 1¾ cents down, December $1.14 3/8.

Most choice hogs sold between $24 and $24.85 a hundred pounds at Chicago, with the top $25, the prices generally 25 to 50 cents lower. Choice weighty steers were steady with the highest price $36.60. Slaughter calves were down as much as a dollar a hundredweight, to $19. Lambs were bid 50 cents or more lower with prices held at $23.25 to $23.50.

Narrower Veto

The United States has moved to give practical application to its objective of progressively narrowing the field within which the big-power veto in the Security Council may operate. Our representatives in the General Assembly's Political Committee have offered a pledge not to use the veto in the Security Council to exclude from the United Nations any of the present applicants which the Assembly may find to be qualified for membership. Going a step further, they also urge elimination of the veto in connection with applications for membership in the U. N. Great Britain has likewise offered to waive the right of the big powers to exclude any nation from the U. N. by a single vote.

As a practical matter, this does not insure the admittance of any of the 11 nations knocking at the door of the United Nations. Certainly it does not open the door to Romania, Bulgaria or Hungary, for neither the United States nor Great Britain used a veto against those countries. Their applications simply failed to get the required number of votes in the Council. Apparently a majority of the delegates did not think those countries met the test requiring members to be peace-loving states willing to accept the obligations of the Charter. And since Russia clings desperately to the veto, using it as a means of blocking qualified applicants until her unqualified satellites are admitted, the deadlock against growth of the U. N. persists.

But the United States and Great Britain have gone on record against further abuse of the veto in connection with membership applications. Here is the first acceptance of a limitation upon the veto by any of the big powers having a right to exercise it. This action reflects a healthy tendency on the part of at least two big powers to modify the unanimity rule in the interests of evolving a more effective world organization.

Unified Reserve

Defense Secretary Forrestal's appointment of an interdepartmental committee to study a more uniform program of the various reserve units is encouraging evidence of the extent to which unification is progressing. What the country needs is not uniformity of thinking, but unity of approach to the over-all problem of its defense. To our mind the welter of strictly compartmentalized reserve subsidiaries makes for precisely the opposite. It is an anachronism to have units such as the National Guard and the Organized Reserves competing for membership and striving to outstrip each other in emoluments. Moreover, this divided approach is not working, as is shown by the fact that the National Guard has lagged far behind its goal in enlistments. The ultimate result of a helter-skelter reserve program is likely to be no effective reserve at all.

The ideal solution, in our opinion, would be to abolish separate titles and to amalgamate all reserves into one organization that could supervise a well-rounded training program, making allowance for separation of functions. We can see no reason for interservice feuding or for duplication of effort. Probably such a moulding is not now possible because of legal complications, particularly with respect to the National Guard. The primary peacetime function of National Guard units is to serve as State militias, and the State supply most of the funds. If the Guard were made a purely Federal proposition, some sort of Home Guard would have to take its place. This would present a fiscal tangle.

Furthermore, many States are jealous of their National Guards. During the war most National Guard units were so fused with other Army units as to lose their strict regional identity. The cooperation between components was far better in World War II than in World War I. But without the compulsion of war there would be a different problem. States could not be expected to yield their National Guards without great reluctance, and the whole matter would be subject to politicking of the most extreme variety.

But while a single reserve must be considered a defense goal, it is not necessary to go this far to bring substantial improvement. For instance, one inequity for which the Forrestal committee could recommend a remedy is the matter of disproportionate pay as between the various reserve units. Certain Naval Reserve operations now are able to offer more inducements than are, say, the Army Reserves. The doctrine should be equal pay for equal work, and we believe Congress would be sympathetic. Most of all, the committee can perform valuable service if it can insure cooperation between reserve agencies in a uniform training program and infuse a sense of uniform mission. In this connection one of the most important tasks is to bring home to members and to the public as well the highly essential place of the reserve in our national security planning.

Foreign Aid

Gradually the European recovery program is taking shape in the public mind preparatory to submission to Congress. Yesterday Secretary Marshall offered a sort of curtain-raiser to a joint session of the Senate and House Committees on Foreign Affairs. It was forthright and cogent. In substance, evidently, the Administration accepts the conclusion of the Harriman Committee. Even on organization the State Department does not dispute the Harriman suggestion of a separate agency for administration. But the main purpose of the Marshall statement has more to do with the interim aid program than with ERP. The Secretary of State furnishes a brief for immediate help of 597 million dollars to France, Italy and Austria. "It will do little good," says Mr. Marshall, "to discuss the merits of a recovery program for Europe if in the meantime political and economic conditions have deteriorated to a point where such a program could not possibly succeed." We agree. Doubtless collapse would already have come if the Soviet Union had not already overplayed its hand. But we cannot count on Muscovite mistakes, and it is to be hoped that in this respect Congress will bear in mind that to give quickly is to give many times over.

The Herter Committee seems to have in mind companion agencies abroad as well as a master organization in Washington to administer ERP. We think the Administration's method better. It suggests bilateral treaties with recipient countries in which the pledges governing the use of funds would be incorporated. Abroad there would simply be one ERP representative, and he would have ambassadorial rank. It is just as essential to avoid any appearance of intervention as it is to see that aid is used for the intended purposes. Of course, we must not be queasy about getting our money's worth in European recovery, but we cannot conduct ourselves like a bull in a china shop. Our ERP representative aboard would be one of two key officials, the other being the director of the agency in Washington. Both posts call for men with wide and sympathetic experience as well as knowledgeability. The insistence upon wide powers for the director is a logical application of experience with Government organizations.

Aid in the name of a European recovery program is to be extended, after all, to China. Evidently Secretary Marshall, as in the case of the loyalty firings, has not been able to resist congressional pressure. What in the world has war-torn China got to do with a European recovery program? China's chief "recovery" materials for European reconstruction are tungsten and tung, or wood, oil. Whether these materials, which are produced in Middle China, are coming out in quantity is doubtful, and no amount of finance will aid the outflow. What would be of service in helping China to do business with the world is currency stabilization. That could be done by putting China back on a silver standard. Perhaps this is the "definite proposal" that Secretary Marshall says will be submitted to Congress in the President's message.

A four-year program is rejected in favor of a year-to-year program. There are too many imponderables to figure out a four-year program—weather and crops, prices, availabilities, and so on. Besides, the ability of Europe to be self-financing, once the pump is primed, is beyond computation. The assumption is made that, if affirmative action is taken, this will come before March 31 next year. Accordingly the first ERP budget would be for a 15-month period. The sum is not given except that it will be "something under 1.5 billion dollars for the last three months of 1948 and somewhat less than six billion dollars for the 1949 fiscal year. Performance by the beneficiaries is more likely to be achieved by scheduling on this annual basis. And aid, after all, is avowedly dependent on self-aid. To sum up, the money will be dirt cheap at the price if it succeeds in putting this subcontinent of 16 nations on the road to recovery and in enabling them to conquer a present political weakness which is perilous to their sovereignty. The danger to that sovereignty—and, therefore, to American security—comes from Moscow. Mr. Marshall comes so close to naming the danger that nobody could mistake his reference. In our opinion, if the economic recovery program is legislated on more or less his lines, the assistance will be as much psychological as economic.

Food And Recovery

The fourth report of Secretary-General Dennis A. FitzGerald to the International Emergency Food Council assembles some grim facts in support of its conclusion that the food situation for the coming season is even more severe than it was in 1946-47. The council has the task of allocating grain imports to needy countries on the basis of available exports, and thus its grasp of conditions is unexcelled. Its report makes clear that American grain has become the arbiter of subsistence or starvation in many areas other than America. Furthermore, the report shows unmistakably that for some years to come the emergency will remain, and that, in consequence, the battle against world hunger may be likened to a war.

The crucial position of American grain becomes apparent in any study of the nature of the present crisis. The poorest crops this year are in deficit areas which have the most need for grain. More than to any other factor, this may be attributed to the weather—a hot, dry summer in Europe following a cruelly hard winter. World grain exports this year are unlikely to exceed the 28.5 million tons of 1946-47, whereas an increase of at least six million tons would be necessary to offset the decline in European grain alone.

On a par with the actual shortage of food is the difficulty of most importing nations in obtaining foreign exchange. The council points out, for instance, that the export wheat cannot be purchased at current price levels. This presents another dilemma which the United States is expected to solve. To be sure, some of the difficulty arises over such international hijacking as is being done by Senor Peron with his artificial price of $5 to $6 a bushel for Argentine wheat. However, with dwindling dollar funds and our own high prices, the main explanation lies in the distortion in the world economy. The exchange problem could be solved by by-passing the exchange barrier between our plenty and Europe's poverty—that is to say, by taking payment in foreign currencies.

The impact at home of the drain on our wheat and the high price of it must also be taken into account. It is impossible to go into the market and buy a third of our wheat crop for export without raising the cost of food for Americans. Less food, especially meat and animal proteins, must be eaten, if we are to send food abroad and feed ourselves at reasonable prices. That is a problem for American statesmanship as well as American self-discipline this winter.

In our view the most significant implication of the IEFC report is that the problem of food cannot be divorced from the complex problem of restoring European production as a whole. For example, the fertilizer which Europe needs to produce more food depends in turn on more raw materials such as coal. This food no less than machinery must be thought of on a long-term basis in the context of the Marshall Plan. That is the prime reason that international allocation machinery in the International Emergency Food Council must be kept in operation. Moreover, the Administration must continue controls over imports and exports so as to prevent sabotage of the IEFC operations.

Loyalty Board

The 20 persons picked by the Civil Service Commission as members of its Loyalty Review Board will be the real determinants of the character of the President's loyalty program. It is they who will give substance to the vague and thoroughly unsatisfactory standards and procedures set forth in the executive order instituting the loyalty program. The composition of the board is encouraging. There are some distinguished and stalwart men in the group; the caliber of some others is unknown to us. We cannot help wishing that there were more young men among them. They will have an arduous, exacting task and will need all the resiliency and fortitude they can muster.

There are two respects in which the board must shape the President's order wisely if the loyalty program is not to degenerate into a dangerous hunt for heresy. One of these is the exercise of tolerance and discretion in considering in connection with the determination of disloyalty, as the President's order requires, association with organizations designated subversive by the Attorney General. Loose or careless consideration could readily mean accepting the ugly doctrine of guilt by association and convicting men on the ground of personal opinion. It is certainly to be hoped, incidentally, that the board will require prompt publication of the Attorney General's prohibitory index.

It is of even greater importance, however, that the board require disclosure of the identity of informants on whose testimony disloyalty charges are founded. The President's order provides that an "investigative agency may refuse to disclose the names of confidential informants, provided it furnishes sufficient information about such informants on the basis of which the requesting department or agency can make an adequate evaluation of the information furnished by them." In our view, the board should regard no information as sufficient for this purpose short of frank disclosure, at the very least to the members of the board, of the informants' identities. Lacking such information the board can have no way of evaluating testimony. We continue to hold the opinion, indeed, that men or women charged with disloyalty ought to be granted the basic American right of confronting their accusers. It is hard to understand how justice can be assured in any other way.

If the loyalty board adopts these standards it will certainly find itself falling short of the quota of convictions which such congressional heresy hunters as Messrs. Rees and Rankin expect of it. This will mean, of course, that it will be subjected to formidable pressure from Capitol Hill to start the heads of Government workers rolling. We hope that it will be able to resist that pressure. For its responsibility is to safeguard the rights and freedoms which have distinguished our society from a police state no less than to safeguard our national security from alien attack.

Milk Prices

The recent milk price increase in the Washington area underscores the continued upswing of prices generally.

It is not at all clear that increases in retail prices at this time are either wise or necessary. The rises may conveivably be a measure of the industry's desire for bigger profits. On this your guess is as good as mine. But against one local dairy-product distributor's statement that price rises are necessary because of "increases in cost of labor, materials, and the recent increase in cost of milk to farmers" may be set the following factors which have acted to reduce operating costs during and since the war:

1. Every-other-day delivery represents a considerable saving, since delivery of milk is the single most important cost in a distributor's business.

2. The percentage of butter fat in fluid milk was reduced during the war and has not been increased since.

3. Increase in cash-and-carry sales has reduced distribution costs.

In Virginia, as in some 26 other States, dairy monopolies are legalized through minimum resale price legislation. Under these conditions, competition—presumably the lifeblood of the free enterprise system—becomes illegal.

The record of dairy interest exploitation is not made whiter by the history of the margarine tax, which these interests lobbied into existence and constantly fight to maintain.

And I have said nothing about the very profitable milk by-products such as cheese, ice cream, etc., which the dairy companies make from milk bought from farmers at lower prices and sold at a much greater profit than fluid milk would bring.

I cannot prove that the current price increases of milk in the Washington area are not absolutely justified by the cost increases the dairies cite, but I do suggest that there is more to the picture than meets the eye.

Baltic Dead

In the November 2 edition of The Washington Post, I read a very informative article about the losses of lives of the Allied and Axis nations in the last war.

According to this enumeration the United Kingdom lost one out of every 150 of its population, the USSR one of every 22 of its 1940 population, France one of every 200, Germany one of every 25, and Italy one of every 150, etc.

With respect to the above I would like to emphasize that sometimes because of war circumstance civilian losses of lives have been far greater than military casualties. Usually greatest losses of lives occur in the small nations, like the Baltic states, on whose territory war was waged. These were overlooked in the summary.

In this connection may I observe that, according to the publication Nazi Conspiracy and Aggression, published by the Office of the United States Chief of Counsel for Prosecution of Axis Criminality, 577,000 persons were murdered in Latvia by the Nazis. If we add to this the more than 1300 murdered by the Bolsheviks in 1940-1941, and about 34,250 deported to Siberia, it gives a total of 612,550 out of a population of two million—not counting the losses of lives occurred after the second Bolshevik occupation which began in the fall of 1944.

In the name of all these dead, we demand justice, the restoration of our rights and of the independence of Latvia and the other Baltic states, and the liberation of the scores of thousands of Balts who are systematically being exterminated by the Bolsheviks.

Latvian Minister.

Voices Of Justice

I have just reread, in The Catholic Mind for November, the letters exchanged between President Truman and Pope Pius XII. These two profound historical documents containing mutual dedications to basic principles of Christian truth should be read again and again by all clergymen, educators, editors, statesmen, and leaders in the worlds of industry and labor. They are a perfect example of two powerful world leaders—one political, the other spiritual—manifesting forthright agreement.

The confidence displayed by these two voices of justice is our insurance against the establishment of a universal police state. There is no hint of moral cowardice which breeds a citizenry of sheep. The reaffirmation of Christian faith, the nobility of tone, the selfless dedication to roles of responsibility in their own spheres, provides a light of hope and charity, as well as faith, in a wrangling world. Let him read these letters who would be guided by the highest motives.

"Selling Short"

I have read, with more than passing interest, recent allegations about gambling on grain exchanges. I wish to thank you for the illuminating article November 6 by Marshall Andrews.

This matter takes me back to when my Junior was a pupil in the sixth grade here studying about stocks, bonds, investments, etc. About that time he told me that Johnnie's uncle had made a lot of money by "selling short" on grain and cotton exchanges, without putting up any of his own funds. Junior wanted to know all about such dealings. Confessing my own ignorance, I told him I would try to find out all about such operations, and then we would discuss the whole situation.

At the first opportunity, I asked the late O. Max Gardner, then engaged in the private practice of the law at Shelby, N. C., to tell me what Junior wanted to know. Mr. Gardner told me, in effect, "selling short" on the exchanges, signified buying, say, grain or cotton which you cannot get (as delivery of the commodity is never made), with money you don't have in hand, and then later on, selling what you never had, and did not pay for, at more than it cost, according to your guess or bet as to futures market. Furthermore, that it would be disastrous if you guessed wrong. The kindly advice deterred Junior, as well as his dad from ever engaging in such operations.

Civil Rights In Washington

The delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations seem to be so bitten by prejudice that they are apparently willing to sacrifice the right of suffrage for the District in order to promote white supremacy. This is one of the most shocking features of the federation resolution, condemning President Truman's Committee on Civil Rights for its forthright handling of the lack of democracy in the Nation's Capital.

White supremacy has driven the federation to embrace the same argument which Southern poll-tax Congressmen have always employed to defeat earlier suffrage legislation. The federation accuses members of the President's Committee of bias toward the traditional customs and conditions of the District. If tradition is the sacred rule-of-thumb by which the federation is guided, then how does it justify its repeated resolutions in favor of suffrage? Has it not been the custom and condition of the District for the last 75 years to be without local suffrage, and for the last 150 years to be without a voice in national Government?

HENRY BEITSCHER,
President, Washington Industrial Union Council (CIO).

Obviously the Federation of Citizens' Associations considers itself a crusading force against subversive influences. Yet a thoughful article of November 2 by Ferdinand Kuhn, jr., analyzes the effect of national racial discrimination on the United Nations Assembly. The article says that a "super bloc" that can outvote any other comes into being when matters involving the rights of colored and subject peoples are involved, and that Russian propaganda plays this up so that in these matters "the American people are classed with the oppressors;" that this bloc has won a majority vote at least five times in the Assembly, and that it contains a threat of "embarrassment or worse for American policy at future assemblies."

Surely Mr. Newell must see that actions such as that taken by the Federation of Citizens' Association in the Capital of the United States can only give aid and comfort to the very forces he and his associates most hate and fear.

MARY-STUART CHAMBERLAIN,
Washington.

A news item in your issue of November 4 with the caption, "'Voice of Democracy' Orators Denied Use of School Hall," presents a situation which is as tragic as it is absurd. Whites and Negroes are denied the privilege of appearing on the same platform to discuss a subject dealing with the Bill of Rights as contained in the first 10 Amendments to the Constitution—the title of the contest being, "Voice of Democracy."

A more farcical situation can not be imagined. White and Negro orators speaking on the "Voice of Democracy" must not speak from any auditorium of any public school in the District of Columbia. Public sentiment should express itself in no uncertain terms against this hydra-headed monster—segregation.

JAMES L. PINN,

In carrying out the educational program of the report use might be made of the groups that already function to a greater or lesser degree on an interracial basis right here in Washington. Here are some such groups with which I have had personal experiences. Some of these are completely interracial in character; others have sponsored intergroup activities; others have gone on record as opposed to segregation. They are the Washington Baha'i Community, the Y.W.C.A., the King-Smith Studios, the D. C. League of Voteless Women Voters, the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, the Community Chest and the N.A.A.C.P.

MARY L. GIBSON.
Washington.

Your editorial of November 1, "Jim Crow," certainly hit the spot.

Not only should the more glaringly apparent consequences of segregation be removed, but also its deeper and less obvious features. In employment and training, for instance, this means not only equal pay for equal work, not only the right to a job commensurate with one's skills, interests and abilities, but, just as important, equal opportunity and incentive for equal achievement.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Creeping Inflation

THE TRAVELER returning from Europe feels the moment he steps on shore the clash and clang and roar of America's vitality. It assails him like a wave, and the contrast with Europe is overpowering.

In Europe you have the feeling of a society that is fraying out at the ends. Here you know that we are still winding up to a greater and greater effort.

The 60 million jobs that once seemed to us a distant dream are now taken for granted. Production levels are up to heights never dreamed of in peacetime.

But so are prices. And that is the catch. During my three months' absence, the price spiral has soared dizzily upward.

You notice the changes immediately. I gave a washroom attendant a dime as a tip. He looked at it mournfully as though it were a worthless relic of a recently vanished civilization. Without a word he dropped it into a saucer in which there were quarters and half dollars. The dime, I was clearly given to understand, had passed out of circulation.

Anyone who travels in Europe, however briefly, must catch some idea of the terrors of inflation. The kind of inflation spreading in Italy and France undermines all values—economic, social and moral. It is like a creeping plague that saps the life-blood of a nation.

WE DO NOT have that kind of inflation in America today. But skilled observers, and among them the President's Council of Economic Advisers, feel that we are certainly not immune from it.

In fact, some of the beginning symptoms are already apparent. We cannot afford to be smug about Europe's black markets when our own markets in some commodities are in a gray or a blackish zone. A cartoon in the current New Yorker shows a used-car lot with shiny new cars in the "used" section and next door a department for "used cars" containing jalopies and older models.

Paying a hotel bill in New York, you get a jolt. You are reminded of the European hotel bills that are added up in hundreds of thousands of drachmas or liras or francs. It hasn't come to that yet. But the threat is there, lurking just behind the cash register.

At this point, it seems to me, we come up against the real problem on aid to Europe. The area of agreement on the need for relief and reconstruction is remarkable. A year ago even the most optimistic prophet would not have ventured to predict general agreement ranging from right-wing Republicans to convinced internationalists. We have an enormous assist, of course, from Molotov, Vishinsky & Co. Without their ranting and raving we should be much more divided than we are.

CONGRESS in the coming session will differ, and sharply, over the aid program both in its emergency and its long-term phases. Disagreement will come on the questions of where, how much, what and when. In the end, nonpartisan support seems certain to underwrite both a short-term and a long-term program.

When it comes to the steps that may be necessary to curb our own inflation, under the burden of further aid, it is hard to find any agreement. That is where partisan politics comes in.

No one would attempt to reimpose retail price control. Politically speaking, it could not be done. The necessity, however, for some kind of allocation and control is painfully evident. Without it our own economy will be in serious danger.

A depression in America following on the present boom is the cornerstone of Soviet policy. They are counting on it just as a mariner counts on the tides. A diplomatic source I believe to be reliable quoted Stalin as having said recently:

"Six months after the onset of the American depression there will be such widespread unemployment and the threat of social upheaval that we will be able to deal on our own terms with American business. We shall buy the machines we need at a fraction of what they now cost."

To give the masters of the Kremlin the depression they are counting on would be unequalled folly. It would be equivalent to handing them the world with a nice red ribbon around it. That is why somehow an area of agreement must be found on the domestic as well as the foreign phase of the relief program.

Returning The Dead

Ruby Wise's November 3 letter attacking Herblock's cartoon, "We Didn't Ask For the Ride" by distorting its spirit with the spiteful addition. "Our sons were not asked 'Who should get the trip' when they were sent overseas," insults those who requested the trip.

Returning the dead is picking off the scabs of wounds mercifully healing. The shock of the fateful telegram is revived by the return of the grim box. People we cherished are no dearer to us in the form of a pathetic pile of dust. It would be better if they remained enshrined in memory as we knew them while their bodies rested on sacred ground, the battlefields they honored with their blood.

Our concern must be with the living: For it was for them our men died. The 22 million dollars spent on the project of honoring the indifferent dead could give help to the helpless, homes to the homeless, hope to the hopeless. What is closer to the American tradition, making life richer or death more ceremonial? Could they speak, the men coming back would champion the need of the quick rather than the salute to the dead.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Cold War And Marshall Plan

THE ANTI-AMERICAN campaign in Europe feeds principally upon a misrepresentation of the Marshall Plan—namely that it is a scheme which will perpetuate the division of Europe and the partition of Germany. Unfortunately too many Americans are playing right into the hands of this anti-American propaganda by presenting it as a kind of lend-lease operation in the cold war. They have, I believe, misunderstood the plan which the European governments worked out in Paris in response to Secretary Marshall's suggestion.

LIPPMANN

This misunderstanding enables the Russians to misrepresent it, and if the misunderstanding is not cleared up, the plan will become unworkable. As one Englishman said to me: "If your money is to be had only by dividing Europe, we are like thirsty men in a shipwreck who drink salt water, knowing that it will drive them mad." American diplomacy in Europe will be defeating American aid to Europe.

If on the other hand, the Marshall Plan is presented truthfully and accurately to the world, and our diplomacy coordinated with it, the anti-American campaign will fail. For the United States will be the sponsor of an immensely generous and disinterested plan to bring peace and happiness to mankind.

THE FACT of the matter is that the European governments which are participating in the Paris program assume the economic unity of Europe, the reduction of political barriers to commerce and mutual aid between eastern and western Europe, if not a political settlement then at least a modus vivendi between east and west. Quite contrary to the Russian propaganda and to so much that is being said here at home, the Paris program envisages a restoration of intercourse, not a showdown and a final separation.

On this crucial point, once it gets down to the hard facts and figures, the Harriman Committee's report confirms the findings of the Paris committee.

"THE FINAL determining factor in the size of a prudent program," says the Harriman report, "is the availability of commodities in this country. The committee has canvassed such availability in detail. At the Paris conference it was concluded that the Western Hemisphere simply did not have the food resources to supply all of the estimated needs." Where then are western Europe and western Germany to obtain the supplies which cannot be obtained in the Western Hemisphere?

The answer, as given in the Paris report, is that they will have to be obtained from eastern Europe: "a substantial and steady resumption of eastern European food, feeding stuffs and timber supplies is assumed in this report; the prewar flow of cereals from eastern Europe is assumed to be restored by 1951, and the supplies of timber are assumed to reach 75 per cent of prewar by 1951."

THE ESTIMATES in the Paris report about coal are no less significant. The European authors of the plan assumed that "the required imports of United States coal will likewise fall fast, as United Kingdom and Ruhr outputs expand, and as increased supplies come forward from Poland. "By 1951, they say, western European imports of coal from America will fall from 41 million metric tons to 5 million, and during this same period the imports of Polish coal will rise from 17 to 31 million tons. "These figures" says the Paris report (vol. II, chapter IV, paragraph 160) "are probably on the high side, as they assume Poland's ability to carry out her present long-range plans for the rehabilitation of her mines, and to procure from abroad (including the United States) a substantial volume of mining equipment."

Thus on food and fuel, the two most urgently needed supplies, the Paris report requires an increase of production in eastern Europe and a rapid resumption of economic intercourse. "Certainly," says the report, "the participating countries intend to do what they can to encourage its resumption."

A VERY interesting thing happened in Europe this summer, which is not perhaps fully appreciated here. Everyone knows, of course, that Mr. Molotov, accompanied by a large delegation, went to Paris for the preliminary meeting with Mr. Bevin and M. Bidault, that Poland and Czechoslovakia had accepted the invitation to participate and had appointed their representatives, that other countries in the Soviet orbit were preparing to follow suit, and that suddenly Mr. Molotov broke off the negotiation, and that the Soviet allies were forbidden to participate.

But what I for one did not know until I had read the Paris report, particularly the conclusions cited above, and had made special inquiries was this: that though the eastern countries were not present at Paris, they were treated in the essential calculations as if they were present. They were not written off. They were counted in. Though they did not formally offer information on what they needed and what they could supply, this information was obtained,—obviously with their knowledge and apparently with their consent—through other channels—through the economic committee for Europe in which they and the Russians are participating at Geneva.

That was how, and that is in fact why, the authors of the Paris program were able to make the critical assumption they did make about the resumption of trade with eastern Europe. And that is why, regardless of the iron curtain and the cold war, a whole network of trade agreements are being negotiated between east and west.

SECRETARY MARSHALL and the State Department are, therefore, faced with an important decision. If the program which they are presenting to Congress is to work, they must give their moral and political support to the policy of the 16 nations who say that "certainly the participating countries intend to do what they can to encourage" the "resumption" of trade with the Soviet orbit. They cannot at the Council of Foreign Ministers accept a final division of Germany and of Europe, followed by a separate "peace" with a western German puppet state, and an aggravation of the cold war. The Marshall Plan, whether we like it or not, commits us and our European friends to a policy of ending the cold war by a negotiated peace and not by unconditional surrender.

For the hard facts and figures of the Paris report and of the Harriman report show that western Europe and western Germany cannot be supported from North America. The supplies do not exist in the Western Hemisphere even if the American taxpayer were prepared to keep buying them for Europe in order to give them away. Western Europe can only be tided over for a while, helped to eke out a precarious existence at a low standard of life, enabled to buy time in which to restore the ruptures and dislocations of the war.

Failing a resumption of trade and of mutual aid between east and west, our foreign "aid program" must, as the Harriman report says in another connection, "degenerate into just another relief program." Without a political settlement, or at least a modus vivendi which keeps the door wide open to an eventual settlement, the American taxpayer will be confronted annually for the indefinite future with appeals directed to his charity and to his fear of communism.

Eisenhower Faces Quiz Today On State of U. S. Air Security

President Truman's air policy commission will quiz Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower today to determine if American air power has fallen below safe levels.

The Army Chief of Staff has been asked to appear before the investigating group this afternoon at 3 o'clock, Chairman Tom Finletter announced. Members want Eisenhower's views on these matters:

Is there danger that the national security is being endangered by lowered aircraft production, now only a fraction of what it was two years ago?

Is security threatened by failure to keep abreast of other powers in new types of planes and in research and development, as has been charged?

What is America's relative position as an air power today? Have we become a third-rate power, as charged by some authorities? What are Russia and other nations doing in the development of long-range bombers and jet aircraft?

Is there a real threat of an air attack on American centers from across the North Pole if war breaks out?

Eisenhower will testify in public session at the Department of Commerce auditorium, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations, will be heard on the same broad questions at 11:30 tomorrow, it was announced. Gen. Carl Spaatz, Air Force Chief of Staff, is expected to appear on Monday.

Budenz Predicts Soviet Attack Unless U. S. Ends 5th Column

The United States will suffer a "destructive attack" from Russia unless she takes action against the Communist fifth column.

That is the warning of Louis F. Budenz, former managing editor of the Communist Daily Worker and now a professor of economics at Fordham University.

Budenz spoke at a lecture sponsored by Dunbarton College Sunday night at the Statler Hotel.

Encouraged by the United States, the underground movements in Europe will rally against the Soviet Union, the former Communist leader who left the party when he returned to the Catholic Church, declared.

He warned that Americans are an easy-going people who don't realize the danger of communism's "determined conspiracy." He emphasized that the Communists are in a position to do serious damage.

Fleming Predicts Accidental Death Toll Cut of 50%

Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, general chairman of the President's Conference on Highway Safety, expressed confidence that the 1946 national accident death rate could be halved by 1949.

Speaking before the Inter-Industry Highway Safety Committee, at the Carlton Hotel, General Fleming said that the 1946 rate was 12 deaths per million vehicle miles, and predictions based on the first eight months of 1947 indicate a current rate of 8.1.

General Fleming stated that five States had an average rate less than the desired six per million vehicle miles, and this fact proved the figure was attainable.

He credited the low rate in the five States to increased activity among local, county and State safety agencies, and stated that in other States lack of interest had failed to reduce it.

Yesterday's meeting was a kick-off for the National Safety Council's drive to cut the national accident death rate to six in three years.

Soviet Propaganda

By Sumner Welles

Need For An Answer

A FRIEND has smuggled out a letter to me from one of the countries most closely enshrouded by the iron curtain. He writes: "The crucial question for millions of people is whether the final triumph of democracy will come in time. Those countless millions have pinned their faith and hope on the 'Voice of America' which, do believe me, they consider as the voice of God."

Propaganda is alien to our traditions. But if this Government is to succeed in its defense of democracy it must find an American form of propaganda that can overcome the results of the Kremlin's present propaganda campaign.

Hitler's assertion that the bigger the lie the greater its effect is unfortunately true. The Soviet government has adopted and improved upon Nazi techniques.

No one can deny that Mr. Vishinsky's vilification of the United States constitutes effective propaganda. His offensive had three objectives: to narcotize still further the peoples under Soviet domination; to arouse fear of the United States in western Europe; and to weaken popular support in this country for a vigorous foreign policy.

THE SOVIET-controlled press and radio are daily publishing falsehoods which are so grotesque as to seem ludicrous in American eyes. But to those behind the iron curtain who possess no other sources of information they confirm Mr. Vishinsky's repeated charges of "warmongering." Under existing conditions the only possible antidote is the "Voice of America." Yet the "Voice of America" is sadly inadequate. It cannot operate effectively unless the Congress votes additional appropriations.

Even here in the United States, Mr. Vishinsky's "warmongering" charges have had their effect. Not a few Americans are searching their hearts and wondering whether his accusations may not contain some grains of truth. The restrained denials of our delegates to the United Nations and the more indignant refutations of our press have not stilled these doubts.

What was needed was a far greater measure of official enlightment of American public opinion as to the basic issues in our foreign relations. In the present crisis it seems incredible that the Secretary of State's daily press conferences, initiated by Charles Evans Hughes and continued until the Byrnes regime, should not have been resumed by Secretary Marshall, and that the latter's recent press conference was the first in two months.

IT IS in western Europe where Soviet propaganda is having its greatest impact.

In France hostility against the United States is more bitter, and more widespread, than ever before. It is the result in part of the resentments left behind them by our military forces. But the rapidly mounting hatred of this country is due primarily to the successful inroads of Soviet propaganda.

More than 1500 centers of "Franko-Soviet Friendship" are today operating throughout France. Every one of them is an agency for the dissemination of the belief that this country desires to dominate France for its own selfish ends. Our effort to stem this campaign is being carried on only in Paris, and by a tiny handful of officials with a mere pittance at their disposal.

GOVERNMENTAL agencies alone cannot cope with such a situation. The cooperation of private American institutions is indispensable. Their participation should be undertaken at the Government's expense.

The objective should be to make available to every class and group within France and within the rest of western Europe the unadorned truth as to American policy, as to the beliefs and desires of the American people, and as to the course of events in this country. The Soviet's campaign of effective lies about the United States can only be successfully counteracted by a campaign of effective truths about the United States.

The Government should enlist the assistance of the American religious organizations — Catholic, Protestant and Jewish; of the responsible heads of labor; outstanding leaders of the press, of industry, of the professions and sciences, and of such organizations as Rotary. It should arrange for them to send representatives to France and to other western European countries to talk with the groups with which they are identified, and to arrange for the most efficient means of procuring a continuing flow of accurate information from the United States for the benefit of all such groups.

THE NEWLY created Cominform has been established to wreck the Marshall Plan and to traduce this Nation's motives. It would surely be ridiculous for the American people, at great cost to themselves, to help European democracy to save itself, only to find that the assistance given has resulted in a wave of anti-American feeling that would gravely impede friendly cooperation between western Europe and the United States in the reconstruction of free world order.

The ultimate success of our present foreign policy will depend in no small part upon the willingness of the Congress to recognize that the moment can no longer be postponed when Soviet propaganda must be fought realistically. If this need is recognized, there can be no question of the eventual outcome. For Soviet propaganda is founded upon falsehood and American propaganda need only be founded upon the truth. But the "Big Lie" will prevail unless the truth is made available.

Maniu Denies Treason, Asks Accusers to Prove Statements

Bucharest, Romania, Nov. 10 (AP). Dr. Juliu Maniu, 75-year-old leader of the opposition National Peasant Party, indignantly denied today all the treason charges against him and demanded that his accusers furnish proof of their statements.

The military court hearing charges against Maniu and 18 co-defendants announced that the verdict would be given tomorrow. If convicted, the defendants could be sentenced to maximum terms of life at forced labor.

Speaking before the court, Maniu declared in a strong voice:

"I demand proof of these painful accusations. I who sacrificed my life for Romania cannot plot or instigate. These calumnies were wont to be thrown at me by the gutter press."

Eighteen other defendants also were given their last chance to speak. One, Florin Roiu, former secretary in the Romanian Foreign Ministry, accused Maniu of nearly placing Romania in a similar position to Greece.

(Greece, the only Balkan country outside the Russian sphere, has been allotted 300 million dollars under the United States program to aid Greece and Turkey.)

Victor Radulescu - Pogoneanu, former counsellor in the Foreign Ministry, said that Maj. Thomas Hall and Lt. William Hamilton, former members of the United States Military Missian in Romania, approached him about what he called a military plan for the country. He said he was only thinking of a plan of political cooperation, and it was the two Americans who insisted on a military plan.

Asked by the court what Hall and Hamilton were up to, Radulescu-Pogoneanu said: "Not even today can I answer this."

Radulescu-Pogoneanu said he saw Roy Melbourne, first counsellor for the United States political representative in Bucharest, in an effort to obtain help in getting Constantin Visoianu, another defendant, from the country, but that Melbourne refused.

For Us, the Living

In this time of "cold war," Armistice Day observances may well evoke the cynic's scorn. But we whose faith in our nation's glorious destiny continues steadfast—let us recall Abraham Lincoln's great challenge to his countrymen in another dark hour: "It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced."

Let us pause, this Armistice Day, to honor our dead by accepting that challenge for our own time, and by vowing that, indeed, they "shall not have died in vain."

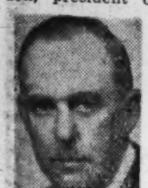
Archaic Ideas On Costs Hit By MBA Head

By S. Oliver Goodman

Archaic ideas as to costs of construction and values of properties must be discarded, John C. Thompson, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, declared yesterday.



Thompson

Thompson who also is president of the New Jersey Realty Co. of Newark, said that "mortgage terms too must be revised to meet current demands."

Addressing the midyear meeting of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks in New York City, Thompson asserted that mortgage leaders can contribute "immeasurably" to solution of the housing shortage if they will "raise their sights to proper heights in appraising the security offered for mortgage loans."

Making clear that he was not suggesting any relaxation of sound underwriting standards, Thompson said one method by which mortgage lenders can provide aid on a sound basis "is to actively participate in the veterans home loan program."

He pointed out that unless private industry provides veterans with houses and the money to finance them, the Government will do so.

"Instead of devoting our efforts simply to opposing" Federal legislation aimed at such a goal, he said, "we should be directing our energies and devoting our resources to eliminating the need for such unnecessary legislation."

INSTITUTE TO END: The third annual Institute on Federal Taxes sponsored by American University, will conclude tomorrow night with a dinner meeting at the Statler. Fritz K. Mann, institute director, said guest speakers will include Associate Justice E. Barrett Prettyman of the United States Court of Appeals, and Charles D. Hamel, chairman of the Excess Profits Council. Robert Miller, institute advisory committee chairman, will preside.

FORMS NEW FIRM: Murray W. Latimer, for 12 years chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board, yesterday announced formation of an industrial relations consulting firm under his own name. An expert in employes pension and welfare programs, Latimer helped set up such plans for numerous companies. As consultant to Senators Bankhead, Harrison and Hayden, he prepared a proposed congressional retirement system which later developed into the successful effort to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act to include Congressmen. He also recently developed a pension plan for the staff of the American Federation of Labor and is now preparing a welfare plan for United States Steel Corp. His new offices will be at 1625 K st. nw.

Harriman Report Scores In Economic Literacy

By J. A. Livingston

THE HARRIMAN COMMITTEE report on foreign aid is comprehensive, sensible, and unbombastic. It starts from the question, Why should we extend aid to Europe? and ends with, How should we go about it? Where a simple word would do, the committee uses one—not two. Thus, though the report is big—more than 300 double-spaced typewritten pages—it runs to depth, rather than bulk.

First things come first. The United States must aid Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, and other western European countries on three grounds:

1. Humanity. People are cold and hungry.

2. Long-term economic interest. We've customarily done a lot of business with western Europe.

3. Short and long-term political interest.

Livingston

Here the committee minces no words: "Communism wins by default when misery and chaos are great enough."

The committee puts in a stop-loss order. America is not Santa Claus. The 16 Marshall Plan countries must provide concrete evidence that they are trying to help themselves. In Great Britain, for instance, greater coal production would be such evidence; in France, a greater willingness to permit German expansion of steel output. If such expansion would provide for the greater and more immediate western European good, National aims must be subordinated to the overall need: To make Europe, once again, a thriving, self-supporting continent.

THE COMMITTEE urges a new, independent agency to administer the aid, with powers and form sufficiently expansive to attract the "most capable men in the United States." The administrator's job would be comparable to that of the chairman of the Controlled Materials Plan in the War Production Board during the war—seeing that who got what made good use of it. The agency would have representatives abroad checking on the use of American resources and dollars. (These representatives are cautioned to work with and through American Ambassadors. They're to implement foreign policy, not make it.) And aid would be on a year-to-year basis, subject to the overall check of Congress. Who knows two years in advance how much progress will be made in one kind of production, how much lag will take place in another?

The immediate task is to inject working capital into Europe—food, fuel and fertilizer. Notes the committee: More food in the Ruhr would mean more coal, which would mean more nitrates, which would mean more fertilizer, which would mean more food. That's short-term.

Ultimately, Europe must rebuild its working capital—expand its industrial and agricultural plant. And, ultimately, in using this renovated and enlarged plant, Europe will face competition with the rest of the world in using it; in selling goods. After all, the sellers' market won't last forever. Thereupon, the committee—with fine, historical perspective—points the economic finger right at the United States, where it belongs: "If Europe is to be able to pay its own way, we must find means of allowing the rest of the world to balance its accounts with us."

IN SHORT, the United States must import more than it exports. That statement betokens the steady growth in economic literacy in the United States since the '20s. Think of it: 19 persons mustered from the ranks of business, finance, labor, agriculture and education and research institutions unanimously and unreservedly agreed to the "import-more" thesis. The really big test will come when Congress is asked to support it anew—in the form of reduced tariffs.

The committee sagely counsels against seeking to get paid for everything. Shipments of food, fuel, and fertilizer—to meet hunger and cold—should be grants in aid. Shipments of industrial equipment—which over the years will pay for themselves—should be financed by the International Bank. If necessary, the United States should increase its commitment to the bank.

Raw materials, agricultural equipment, machinery, spare parts—required for increased production—ought to be financed by the Export-Import Bank. The committee would let the World Monetary Fund provide dollars for the stabilization of currencies—when feasible. If fund officials feel that is not possible under the charter, why then, says the committee, change the charter.

FINALLY, the Marshall Plan may uncover hidden assets—dollar balances and securities of European nationals held abroad. For years, capital has fled war, nazism, communism, scarcity and unrest. This money must be coaxed back—to go to work. Once men of means see that economic order is being established, that social organization is becoming firm again, they'll slowly bring the money back home. More significant, once again some of the most enterprising brains in Europe will go back to work organizing production and distribution.

The single greatest persuader to frightened European capital today would be a resounding vote by Congress for an aid-to-Europe plan. We don't have to make a definite dollar commitment for a specific number of years. All we need is to start the plan off and, as the committee says, "give Europe a pledge of our interest . . . and assurance of continuous consideration and assistance."

'Enemy Ideas' Can Be Beaten, O'Neil Holds

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 10 (AP). "Enemy ideas" can be whipped by "strengthening and replenishing your ideology and confirming its superiority in practice James F. O'Neil, national commander of the American Legion, declared here today.

In a radio interview by Belmont Farley of the National Education Association as part of the American Education Week, O'Neil said that maintaining the high ideals of American schools offers one of the best assurances that the "cold war" against Communism will never "heat up."

Leesburg Man's Body Found Near Railroad Tracks

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 10.—The body of a man identified as Albert Carlyle, 55, of Leesburg, was found tonight beside the Washington and Old Dominion Railroad tracks near the Leesburg station.

Dr. W. P. Frazier, Loudoun County coroner, issued a certificate of death from a fractured skull. Commonwealth's Attorney Sterling M. Harrison said his office will investigate.

The body was found by trainmen on a train pulling into the station at 5:45 p. m.

Mr. Carlyle, a mechanic, leaves a wife and three children.

Missing Taxi Found In Williamsburg Lake

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 19 (AP).—Williamsburg City police found a taxicab which had been reported as missing with its driver since Saturday in the waters of Lake Matoaka tonight 30 feet from the lake's dam.

The vehicle was found by H. B. Smith and C. E. Stevens, city police officers. They said they first discovered a broken fence along the lake and investigated.

The discovery was made several hours after Williamsburg police issued a missing persons alarm for Lindsay Wilson, a Williamsburg cab driver, who had been absent from his job since Saturday night.

Negro Elected As Supervisor In Va. County

Suffolk, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—William A. Lawrence, independent Negro candidate for the Nansemond County Board of Supervisors from Cypress magisterial district, was today certified as elected by the county commissioners of elections. The official count showed Lawrence winner by two votes—292 to 290. Unofficial returns had indicated the contest was a tie, 291 to 291.

Lawrence defeated Frank E. Harrell, Nansemond County farmer and Democratic nominee.

The election of Lawrence marks the first time that a Negro has held public office in the county since the post-Civil War period. A Negro served as commissioner of revenue in 1887.

Lawrence attended the old Nansemond Collegiate Institute here and taught for 11 years in Virginia schools. He is now a building contractor.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Alexandrians To Protest On Colasanto

Protest by citizens against last week's appointment of Nicholas A. Colasanto as city manager is expected to highlight tonight's meeting of Alexandria city council.

The item isn't on the docket of business. But a citizen group which feels Colasanto's experience as a lawyer does not fit him for the post of city manager will ask the council to reconsider its action.

Mayor William T. Wilkins said yesterday that the council could reconsider only on motion of a councilman on the majority side—one who voted for Colasanto.

Since the matter is undocketed, it will come last on the agenda, unless the council agrees to hear it earlier.

The scheduled business of 14 items includes hearings on four rezoning applications, a request from the Rosslyn Gas Co. that the city release a right of way on the waterfront, and a request from the American Legion Auxiliary, Unit No. 24, for a permit to sell cherries on the city streets February 21 and 23, 1948.

Petitions continued to be circulated calling for a special election on the reshaping of the city council. Sponsors of the movement to change to a seven-man council elected at large, from the present form of six elected from wards, and three at large, said 100 petitions have been distributed.

To force an election they must collect signatures equivalent of 10 per cent of the qualified voters in May, 1946—about 1500.

'Gas' Truck Wrecked, R40 Blocked 4 Hours

Ridgeville, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—A tank truck loaded with 4500 gallons of gasoline was wrecked on a curve near here early today, blocking U. S. Route 40 for four hours.

The truck was bound from Baltimore to Hagerstown.

Firemen from Mount Airy were called to wash spilled gasoline from the highway. The driver, Leon A. Brunner, 37, Hagerstown, was temporarily imprisoned in the cab. He was treated for head and leg cuts by Dr. Carl Van Poole of Mount Airy.

Traffic was rerouted between Frederick and Baltimore over Route 26 to prevent a possible fire.

Incinerator Case

Two Accused Of Murder in Baby Death

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—Martin Philpott, 24, waived a preliminary hearing today on a charge of first-degree murder in the death of his unmarried sister's day-old baby.

Police said a warrant has been issued for the arrest of the baby's mother, Gertrude Philpott, who also faces a charge of murder. She was reported to be under a physicians care at her brother's home here.

Magistrate Frank Martin of Essex ordered Philpott held without bail.

Police were told the sister, identified as a registered nurse, gave birth to the child early Saturday without medical assistance.

Philpott was arrested by a guard at the Glenn L. Martin aircraft plant Saturday when he approached an incinerator with a bundle wrapped in newspapers. The package was turned over to Essex police, who said that it contained the baby, still alive. The baby was sent to a hospital, where it lived one day.

The defendant was first charged with assaulting the baby girl with intent to kill, but the docket entry was changed after the infant's death last night at the Baltimore City Hospital.

Philpott is an employe of the Martin plant.

Official Fears Foes May Kill Cooperative

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—W. G. Wysor, general manager of the Southern States Cooperative, declared here today that "unless the present generation of members are willing, as the pioneers did, to take off their coats and fight" for co-ops, "the Southern States Cooperative won't be here forever."

In his report to 2000 delegates representing a six-State area here for the twenty-fourth annual meeting, Wysor charged enemies of the cooperative way of doing business might succeed in their attempts to place the farmer back in economic bondage, "unless you and American farmers generally are willing to give your cooperatives ample patronage, unless you are willing to put your capital in your own business . . . lend it complete moral support . . ."

Every farmer—including those not co-op members—gets better quality supplies at less cost because farmers do a portion of their business through their own cooperatives.

Treasurer O. E. Zacharias, jr., disclosed that Southern States Cooperative completed its 1946-47 operating year with a membership of 211,379 and did over 83 million dollars business during that period.

The two-day convention is being held at the Mosque Auditorium.

Ex-Wac De LaTour Held a Suicide

Dr. James L. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner, yesterday issued a certificate of suicide by barbituric poison in the death of Miss Stephanie de la Tour, former Wac, found dead in her apartment in Suitland Manor Sunday night.

Dr. Boyd said Miss de la Tour apparently had no relatives. The friend to whom she addressed a suicide note, Miss Elizabeth Waters, is coming here from Orangeburg, S. C.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—Grains ended a dull session today with prices slightly lower on the Board of Trade. Volume was restricted by uncertainty over the Administration's aid-to-Europe program and the fact that tomorrow, Armistice Day, is a holiday.

Major reasons for the small selling pressure were snows in Nebraska and Northwestern Kansas, plus the fact that the Government made only minor purchases of cash wheat late last week. The selling entered the pits in dribbles and at no time did prices drop sharply.

Wheat ended ½-1½ lower. December 2.96½-2.96½; corn was 1½-1¾ lower, December 2.32¾@2.32½; and oats were ¾-1¾ lower, December 1.14¾.

Reports from the Weather Bureau and to private houses mentioned snow of 2 to 4 inches in western Nebraska, but only light flurries in western Kansas. Analysts doubted if moisture was sufficient to cause any appreciable change in the pessimistic outlook for the 1948 winter wheat crop.

Commodity Credit Corporation buying last weekend was limited to 230,000 bushels of wheat at Kansas City and 15,000 bushels at Chicago, the agency announced. Cash dealers said the Government was buying moderate quantities of grain today.

Tar Heels Coming to Town 'Fightin' Mad' for Terps

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE BELT I got out of the Redskins' defeat at Pittsburgh was not the defeat of the Redkins, but the heavy-footed marauding of Jim the Jolter Castiglia, who was butting his head into the Steelers' line all day and averaging three yards a clip.

POVICH

Twenty-eight times they gave Castiglia the ball, a weighty day's work in the pro league, and he stomped out 85 yards in gains—no mean feat with the Redskins' line as well as the Steelers' line to contend with. The Redskins got licked, but Castiglia was giving it the old college try.

The fact is that Castiglia is no mere football mercenary playing for his hire. Seven years after his graduation from Georgetown, and at the age of 30, he's still playing football for the fun of it in a business that has its share of salary squabbles. Two pro clubs bounced Castiglia off their rosters earlier in the season before he caught on with the Redskins.

Castiglia, as heir-apparent to the flourishing Washington trucking business of his father-in-law, doesn't have to play football for a living. With him, it's pride against the opinion of the Baltimore Colts that he was a washed-up fullback.

HE JOINED the Baltimore club after getting his release from the Eagles and failing to persuade the Redskins that he could be useful to 'em. That was two months ago, when the Redskins had dreamy visions of a running attack that didn't need the likes of Castiglia. He played two games with Baltimore and was waived out of the All-America Conference.

At Baltimore, Castiglia was drawing one of the fancier salaries with his contract calling for $10,500. When the Colts advised him of his release, he offered to take a $2500 cut. It wasn't a salary matter, they said. Castiglia didn't fit in with the scheme of things at Baltimore, they told him—too slow, and he had that bad knee.

So Castiglia went job hunting and haunted the Redskins' office. Coach Turk Edwards, now lacking fullbacks, showed new interest in Jim. What salary terms did Castiglia want? "Suit yourself," said Jim, "and I'll play for nothing, just to show Baltimore I'm not washed up." The Redskins filled in a satisfactory figure.

IT WAS CASTIGLIA'S sheer enthusiasm that brought the Redskins their second touchdown and restored them to the ball game at Pittsburgh, cutting the Steelers' lead to 21-14. They were looking pretty futile after getting a first down on the Pittsburgh three-yard line. Three times Castiglia tried to bull the ball over and had gained only a yard.

On fourth down they gave to Joltin' Jim for a final try, and he hit into the line again and got nothing—but only temporarily. The Steelers apparently had him stopped cold, and struggling against a massed defense at right guard, but Castiglia's big legs never stopped churning. He bounced off the struggling pile-up and twisted to the outside to fall on his face over the goal line.

That's what Castiglia meant when he said before the game, "Pro football is more fun than college football. The officials don't give you that quick whistle like they give the college boys, and you can keep ploughing as long as you're still on your feet. That's the way I like to play it."

THERE'S A NEW respect for Castiglia among the Redskins. In less than two weeks, with scant grounding in the Redskins' style of play, he's their regular fullback—the man who gives them a semblance of a running game to set the scenery for Baugh's passes. For the fans, too, it's refreshing to see a Redskin back who can carry the ball through the middle and knock somebody down besides himself.

I have a proper respect for Baugh's passing wizardry and it's wonderful to watch—but scarcely all day. I'm old-fashioned enough, I guess, to like it when a guy grabs that ball and goes pounding through the inside—like Osmanski of the Bears and Fritsch of the Packers and Van Buren of the Eagles, and now Castiglia of the Redskins.

Castiglia may not be quite of the class of the others, but the try he gives it is wonderful. He's driven not only by those powerful legs. After the game at Pittsburgh, he said, "I hope those Baltimore people were looking."

Nats Draft Catcher, Infielder And Pitcher

The Washington Baseball Club dipped into the minor league draft grab-bag yesterday and came up with a left-handed pitcher, a second baseman and a catcher—at an outlay of $25,000.

The three players gained by the Nats among the 26 drafted by major league clubs at the Cincinnati session are:

Forrest Thompson, 29-year-old southpaw from Atlanta; Clarence Difani, second baseman, former Yankee property drafted from Newark, and J. Leonard Okrie, catcher from Nashville.

Difani was the most expensive purchase, costing the $10,000 draft price of the International League. He is a 24-year-old 6-footer, weighing 185, who batted .315 for Augusta, Ga., in the Sally League last year. A right-handed hitter, Defani was highly recommended by Scout Mike Martin.

Didn't Play for Newark

Difani did not play for Newark despite the fact he was Newark property. The Yankees put him on their Newark roster and thus upped the draft price to $10,000.

Thompson won 16 games and lost 9 for Atlanta last year, striking out 110 batters. He was recommended by Scout Joe Engel. He's a 29-year-old left-hander, weighing 190.

Catcher Okrie was the property of Nashville but played last season for Fayetteville in the Class B Tri-State League. Like Thompson, $7500 was his draft price. He batted .315 and at 6 feet 1 inch is tall as catchers go. He hits right-handed.

Vice President Calvin Griffith represented the Nats at the draft meeting. Major league clubs can still claim any undrafted talent until the Thursday deadline, and the Nats may be for Garden Gillenwater, Milwaukee outfielder who bats right-handed.

Clubs Dish Out $245,000

Major league clubs paid $245,000 for the 26 players they selected. Rigid restrictions prevented "raiding" of minor talent. Only one player may be drafted from any one club.

According to the Associated Press, Detroit ran into that barrier as it tried to pick up Clifford Dapper, 27-year-old catcher from Montreal. Dapper batted .291, drove in 105 runs and worked in 136 games for Mobile, Ala., last year and was the loop's most valuable player.

He was one of the choice plums in the draft, but he was saved for his Brooklyn owners through the fact Pitcher Al Gerheauser had been plucked from the Montreal roster by the St. Louis Browns, first choosers.

With Dapper's selection ruled out by Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Detroit joined the champion New York Yankees and the pennant-winning Brooklyn Dodgers as the only clubs not making a selection.

Other selections:

PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES—Walter Dubiel, Seattle of the Pacific Coast League; John Blistnik, outfielder, Baltimore of the International League; Hubert G. Wilson, infielder, Rochester International League.

WASHINGTON SENATORS—Clarence Difani, infielder, Newark, International League; Forest Thompson, pitcher, Atlanta, Southern Association; J. Len Okrie, catcher, Nashville, Southern Association.

PITTSBURGH PIRATES—Forrest H. Main, Kansas City, American Association; Max West, San Diego, Pacific Coast League; Joseph Kleckley, Birmingham, South Association.

CHICAGO WHITE SOX—Raymond Fletcher, Milwaukee, American Association, catcher; Roman Brunswick, Houston, Texas League, pitcher; James F. Goodwin, Jersey City, International League, pitcher; Lloyd D. Donnellshen, Oklahoma City, Texas League, pitcher.

CHICAGO CUBS—Lloyd B. Lowe, Columbus, American Association, shortstop.

PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS — Don W. White, San Francisco, Pacific Coast League; William DeMars, Mobile, Southern Association, infielder.

CINCINNATI REDS—Ferrell Anderson, St. Paul, American Association.

CLEVELAND INDIANS—William A. Kennedy, Louisville, American Association, pitcher; Leonard Ratto, Portland, Pacific Coast, infielder.

NEW YORK GIANTS—Jack P. Hallett, Indianapolis, American Association, pitcher.

BOSTON RED SOX—John Cetrowski, Los Angeles, Pacific Coast; Boris M. Martin, Toledo, American Association.

BOSTON BRAVES—Clint Conatser, Buffalo, International; Edward R. Post, Syracuse, International, pitcher.

DETROIT TIGERS—Clifford Dapper, Montreal, International.

ST. LOUIS CARDINALS—Lawrence Higgins, Minneapolis, American Association.

Red Grange Asks Clarification of 'Extra Man' Rule

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—Harold (Red) Grange, University of Illinois football great and now a radio commentator on the sport, said today that the "extra man" rule which cost Northwestern a 7-6 defeat by Ohio State Saturday should be clarified.

Grange, who saw the game, told the Herald-American quarterback meeting that Center Dick Price was "obviously out of the play" in which head Linesman E. C. Curtiss of Wheaton, Ill., charged Northwestern with having 12 men on the field.

Granke said Price, who had been replaced by Alex Sarkisian, easily could have been off the field before Ohio State got the ball in play, if he had headed straight for the sidelines.

"Instead, he angled off about 30 yards down the field and was about 5 yards inside the sidelines when the ball was snapped," Grange explained.

Taylor Court Clinic Scheduled Tonight

"Chuck" Taylor will appear at the American University gym tonight at 8 p. m. to demonstrate basic basketball fundamentals and ball handling.

Regarded as one of the leading basketball teachers, Taylor's clinic will be held only one night. Members of the American U. basketball teams will demonstrate various techniques under Taylor's guidance. Admission is free.

'Sh-h' Is Watchword at Maryland as Terps Prime Secret Weapon for North Carolina

'Iron Curtain' Hides Workouts

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

SH!!

That was the word at College Park yesterday as Maryland launched preparations for its Saturday outing against North Carolina at Griffith Stadium.

The fenced-in football practice field was guarded almost as closely as Fort Knox. Student managers were everywhere, seeing to it that only those with the blessing of the Terrapin football staff witnessed what was going on behind the barricaded area.

Only the first 20 minutes of the drill, devoted to calisthenics, were open to the public. After that it was a closed affair.

Inside of the secret practice field Coach Jim Tatum and his staff went to work and even nightfall didn't stop them. On went the lights as the squad opened the most intensive week of drills this year.

And what they're cooking up bodes no good for the terrible Tar Heels, if it works. Until 2 p. m. Saturday, when the teams line up for the kickoff, it's got to be a secret.

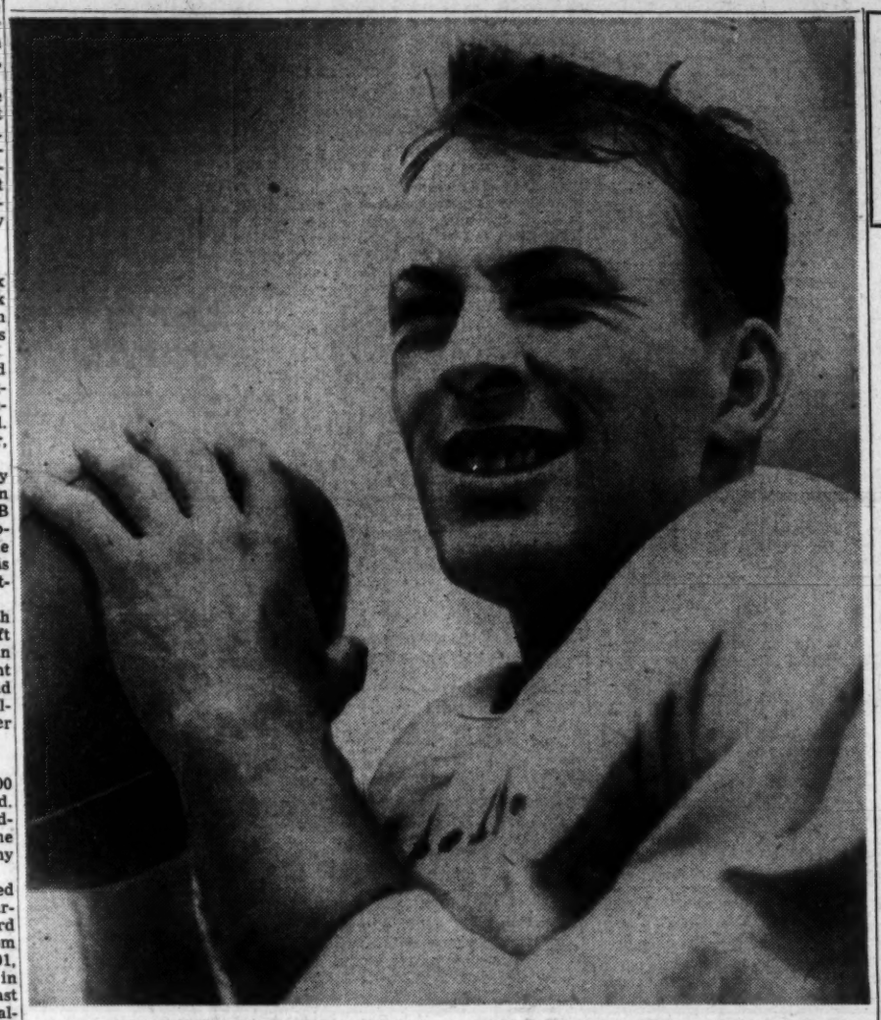
"We've planned this all season for this game," Tatum said. "I hope it works. We're going to give it everything we've got."

The only announcement that Tatum had was that Center Gene Kinney and Quarterback Vic Turyn, two Terp mainstays, had been named team captains for Saturday.

Halfback Hubie Werner, out since the Richmond game almost a month ago, was on hand for the session, but he isn't being counted on for service. Left Halfback Johnny Idzik was running in his place in the varsity array which included Turyn at quarter, Harry Bonk at fullback and the irrepressible Lu (Bambino) Gambino at the other halfback spot.

Only Calisthentics Held in Open

Shl was the word from the field, but the athletic office wanted it known that plenty of tickets are still available. The advance sale has already passed the 22,000 mark, including 9000 students, and a crowd of 30,000 is expected for the tussle.



LOOK OUT, TERPS—Charlie Justice (above) is the man Maryland University's Terps are worried about stopping in Saturday's game with North Carolina University at Griffith Stadium. Justice, one of the Nation's top backs, accounted for two touchdowns last week in the Tar Heels' 41-6 rout of North Carolina State. He gained 123 yards in 14 tries, completed three of four passes and punted five times for an average of 41.2 yards

Lions Get Defenseman From Hawks

In an attempt to strengthen their lineup and snap a five game losing streak, the Washington Lions have acquired George Hunchuk, 22-year-old defenseman, from the Chicago Blackhawks of the National League.

Hunchunk is flying east from Chicago and is expected to be on hand for tonight's game with the high scoring Indianapolis Capitols of the Western Division.

Another piece of good news is the expected return to action of Larry Archambeault, first string defenseman who has been out of the lineup for more than a week with strained ligaments.

Still on the injured list, however, are the club's two leading point-makers, Scotty Mair and Ken Schultz. Since their absence from the lineup, the Lions have been a badly weakened club. The acquisition of Hunchuk will enable little Walt Babey to move up to his regular wing position.

Indianapolis, now holding second place in the Western half, won eight of 13 games thus far and holds a big margin over every other American League team in scoring. The Capitals have flashed the red light 72 times this season, which puts them 13 goals up on the next highest scorers, Buffalo's Bisons.

Michigan Still Second

Notre Dame Draws 117 of 169 Ballots as Nation's Top Team

By Jack Hand

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Notre Dame strengthened its position as No. 1 college football team of the country by its convincing burst of power against Army according to most of thte 169 writers participating in the weekly Associated Press poll.

Approximately 69 per cent of the voting sports writers ranked the fighting Irish atop the field with 117 of the 169 ballots. A week ago they had drawn 106 firsts out of 186.

Some veteran writers who have been watching football for many seasons ranked the Notre Dame club as the best they ever saw.

Despite the hoop-la surrounding the last meeting of the Cadets and Irish in the curernt series, Michigan attracted 34 first place votes for its 35-0 romp through Indiana, and wound up again as the Nation's second best team.

The Wolverines, who led the pool during early season, head toward one of the toughest tests of their perfect record Saturday when they face an improving Wisconsin team which rocketed into ninth place by a 46-14 rout of Iowa.

Pennsylvania nosed out Southern Methodist for third place although both continued unbeaten and untied by respective wins over previously undefeated Virginia and the sub-par Texas Aggies.

Seven writers tabbed the Penn eleven for first place after its 19-7 conquest of Virginia while two liked SMU for the No. 1 spot off its 13-0 win over the Aggies.

Penn Meets Army

The Quakers take their next-to-last hurdle Saturday when they entertain a subdued Army team which dropped out of the first 10 for the first time in years. The Cadets were ranked thirteenth.

Southern California, 14-0 victors over stubborn Stanford, clung to fifth place and drew five first place ballots while Georgia Tech continued in sixth position despite its close call against Navy, 16-14. The Engineers clash with Alabama figures to be the best game in the South this week.

Texas surged into seventh, pushing unbeaten-untied Penn State to eighth. The Longhorns thumped Baylor 28-7. Penn State which had to go hard in the mud to stop Temple, 7-0, faces trouble ahead in Navy Saturday.

Wisconsin made the top 10 for the first time this season. California regained tenth place when Virginia sunk into the second division by bowing to Penn after a close battle.

On the basis of point score, Notre Dame had 1612 to Michigan's 1628 and the next club, Penn, was over 300 points behind.

How They Rank:

1.	Notre Dame (117)	1612
2.	Michigan (34)	1528
3.	Pennsylvania (7)	1145
4.	Southern Methodist (2)	1137
5.	Southern California (5)	995
6.	Georgia Tech (1)	826
7.	Texas	570
8.	Penn State (3)	539
9.	Wisconsin	122
10.	California	102

11, Illinois, 97; 12, William and Mary, 85; 13, Army, 64; 14, Alabama, 61; 15 and 16, Virginia and Mississippi, tied, 46; 17, Missouri, 48; 18, Utah, 36; 19, North Carl, Va., 33; 20, Minnesota, 32.

Others receiving votes were Columbia, 25; Kentucky, 22; Kansas, 21; Mississippi State, 16; Wake Forest, 15; UCLA, 10; Maryland, 9; Villanova, 5; South Carolina, 4; Vanderbilt and Wesleyan each 3; Boston College, Princeton, Rutgers and Purdue, each 2; Georgia, Trinity, Navy and Rice, each 1.

James Branson Named Exeter Grid Captain

Exeter, N. H., Nov. 10.—James W. Branson of 4435 Greenwich Parkway, Washington, D. C., was elected today captain of the 1948 Phillips Exeter Academy football team. Branson played left halfback in Exeter's 12-6 victory over Andover last Saturday. Branson is New England interscholastic high hurdles champion.

Famed Skater Dies

Minneapolis, Nov. 10 (AP).—Oscar Johnson, 51, one of this country's leading speed skaters of three decades ago and later an outstanding skating coach, died at his home Saturday after an illness of two years.

Gambino, Horn Tied in Scoring

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Lucien (Lu) Gambino of Maryland and Darwin Horn of Pepperdine scored three touchdowns apiece last Saturday to continue knotted today for the Nation's collegiate football scoring lead with 84 points each.

Gambino raced against Duquesne for his scores in Maryland's 32-0 win, while Horn got his tripple in a 47-0 rout of California Poly. Both have scored 14 touchdowns—Horn in six games and Gambino in seven.

Gambina has surpassed the 72 figure of last year which led the Southern Conference and which was registered by Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice of North Carolina.

Roy Preston of undefeated Missouri Valley is third, with 81 compiled on 10 touchdowns and 21 conversions.

A Hero?

Doug Turley Is Redskins' Latest Star

By Bill Burnett

THE PLAYER they pulled out of a hat, whose failure featured 3 21-14 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers, was the Washington Redskins' man of the hour yesterday as they faced a bleak 1947 future of five games.

If Doug Turley, 28-year-old end, had snagged a pass in the last three minutes of action Sunday the Redskins might have had a thrilling tie, depending upon the conversion attempt. Then they'd have a record of 2 won, four lost and one tied.

Instead they go into this week's game with the Lions in Detroit with as many defeats as they've ever suffered in a season—five—and don't figure to catch either Pittsburgh or Philadelphia in the eastern division, National Football League, race by winning all their remaining games.

But Turley, obtained by the Redskins in 1943 when the Wilmington, Del., team was disbanded and players' names drawn from a hat by NFL teams, had no apologies for the club's best effort this season, despite the loss. He and his mates did all they could to avert it—except, of course, catch the tying touchdown pass.

THERE WAS exactly 2:55 of the game left when Turley had a chance to fittingly cap his brillance throughout. The Redskins had marched from their own 21, led by Sammy Baugh, Dick Poillon and Jim Castiglia, to the Steeler 7. Poillon's sensational grab of Baugh's toss had covered the last 28 yards.

Castiglia got only two yards in two smashes and Baugh tried a quarterback sneak that reached the two. It was fourth down when Sammy hurled to Turley, who waited patiently in the end zone after taking the few steps from his left end position.

It was a perfect pass and Turley couldn't have missed it if one of the massed defenders arms and the bal lat the critical inhad flashed between big Doug stant. The flicker of Turley's eye caused the ball to flop from his nervous fingers. That was the ball game.

Besides Turley, high praise was as usual due Baugh and such backfield mates as Poillon, Castiglia and Bob Naussbaumer . . . On the line Joe Tereshinski forgot his cracked elbow and played like an All-American, with able assistance from John Adams, John Steber and Kl Aldrich . . . Steber, incidentally, suffered the major injury, administered by Teammate Castiglia as he ployew for one touchdown . . . Six stitches were needed in the big guard's jaw . . . Castiglia, playing his first full game for the Skins, was only 11 trips off the league record for rushing attempts . . . New York's Harry Newman holds that with 39 line smashes for 114 yards in 1934 . . . Jim's only injuries were inflicted by the rubbing on his face of his own head guard and mask . . . Even at 30 he looked ready for another 28 excursions with the ball after the game . . .

Wake Forest, Texas Losses Still Rankle Carolinians

By Noel Houston

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 10.—When the big passin' and plungin' team of North Carolina takes the field against Maryland at Washington Saturday, the 35,000 fans expected to be on hand at Griffith Stadium will see a Tar Heel outfit that is still fighting mad about two unexpected doses of medicine.

What Texas (34-0) and Wake Forest (19-7) made the Blue and White swallow before the season was even well under way, disgusted and infuriated Coach Carl Snavely's football elite.

It was all the sports writers' fault, of course, Tar Heel players are college students who can read, and all the newspapers and magazines had said in September that North Carolina was almost a sure thing to go through the season undefeated, and furthermore was a cinch to wind up in one of the better bowls.

Took What Happened!

This seemed like conservative crystal-gazing to the fans—and perhaps to some of the more gullible players, unfortunately — after North Carolina opened the season by taking apart Georgia, its Sugar Bowl opponent last New Year's day.

But then came those two stunning successive Saturday.

The boys were pretty hurt about the Texas game and there was a disposition to explain how the ttam got so airsick flying out to that foreign country that nobody could keep anything on his stomach, how everyone was coughing his head off with a cold, and how unbearably hot it was in that tropical region.

About all that was said after the Wake Forest game was that Halfback Tom Fetzer unsportingly threw too many touchdown passes and the Wake Forest team wouldn't let the Tarheels have the ball long enough to do anything with it.

It was about then anger began usrging in the wide, deep chests of the Tarheel players, and they finally got so mad they ran berserk for three Saturdays in a row, piling up a total of 96 points, while they hustled the ball over and around Florida, Tennessee and North Carolina State.

They're Still Mad

As they started working out today for the Maryland encountertoiling under lights after sundown—the North Carolinians showed no sign that their month-long anger was abated.

Once again, as at the season's opening, there is a faint but heady aroma in the air—whiffs of a chance to play in one of those blueribbon New Year's Day games—and Charlie (Choo-Choo) Justice and Co. appear rather highly resolved not to let this second chance for the post-season glory be dissipated in Washington's November air.

The Carolina fans, who started out this fall pleasantly persuaded that they had about the best ball club in the country, are once more elevated to that happy state of mind.

The way they are talking in Chapel Hill this week, it will be surprising if a single Maryland player will have been foolhardy enough to stay in the same stadium with the Tar Heels till the end of the game.

Newsweekly Easy Winner of Sagamore Stakes at Pimlico

Equisun 2d, King's Bowl Takes Third

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 10.—Alfred G. Vanderbilt had his colors carried to their second stakes triumph in as many days when Newsweekly, a home bred son of New World and Spot News, easily accounted for the twelfth running of the Sagamore Stakes here this afternoon.

The young member of the host organization's board of directors saw his Halconero, an Argentine-bred, win Saturday's running of the Exterminator.

Newsweekly picked up an easy $7095 in turning back the small field of juveniles. Under a hand ride by Ruperto Donoso, the chestnut colt reached the end of the six furlongs two lengths before Wayne Kendrick's Equisun to take the winner's end.

Brookmeade Stable's King's Bowl was third, beaten a neck for the place, and he was a length ahead of Bobanet Stable's Tenabob. Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Balmoral brought up the rear.

Newsweekly was the first favorite of the day to win. The rangy colt was a strong choice with the 13,402 fans on hand for the last lap of sport at this point and he paid $2.80.

The third race, which drew seven so-called jumpers, found only three of the starters around at the finish of the two-mile course. Picture Prince, carrying the colors of Mrs. Ethel du Pont Weir, was an easy winner by 30 lengths after all the contention was eliminated.

Jockey Charlie Peoples was looking back at the end to see Paper Cutter some 30 lengths away. Abidale, a member of the favored entry which included Bar Ship, was a distant third. Picture Prince returned a $13 mutuel. The running time was 4:23.

Tar Heels Coming to Town 'Fightin' Mad' for Terps

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE BELT I got out of the Redskins' defeat at Pittsburgh was not the defeat of the Redkins, but the heavy-footed marauding of Jim the Jolter Castiglia, who was butting his head into the Steelers' line all day and averaging three yards a clip.

POVICH

Twenty-eight times they gave Castiglia the ball, a weighty day's work in the pro league, and he stomped out 85 yards in gains—no mean feat with the Redskins' line as well as the Steelers' line to contend with. The Redskins got licked, but Castiglia was giving it the old college try.

The fact is that Castiglia is no mere football mercenary playing for his hire. Seven years after his graduation from Georgetown, and at the age of 30, he's still playing football for the fun of it in a business that has its share of salary squabbles. Two pro clubs bounced Castiglia off their rosters earlier in the season before he caught on with the Redskins.

Castiglia, as heir-apparent to the flourishing Washington trucking business of his father-in-law, doesn't have to play football for a living. With him, it's pride against the opinion of the Baltimore Colts that he was a washed-up fullback.

HE JOINED the Baltimore club after getting his release from the Eagles and failing to persuade the Redskins that he could be useful to 'em. That was two months ago, when the Redskins had dreamy visions of a running attack that didn't need the likes of Castiglia. He played two games with Baltimore and was waived out of the All-America Conference.

At Baltimore, Castiglia was drawing one of the fancier salaries with his contract calling for $10,500. When the Colts advised him of his release, he offered to take a $2500 cut. It wasn't a salary matter, they said. Castiglia didn't fit in with the scheme of things at Baltimore, they told him—too slow, and he had that bad knee.

So Castiglia went job hunting and haunted the Redskins' office. Coach Turk Edwards, now lacking fullbacks, showed new interest in Jim. What salary terms did Castiglia want? "Suit yourself," said Jim, "and I'll play for nothing, just to show Baltimore I'm not washed up." The Redskins filled in a satisfactory figure.

IT WAS CASTIGLIA'S sheer enthusiasm that brought the Redskins their second touchdown and restored them to the ball game at Pittsburgh, cutting the Steelers' lead to 21-14. They were looking pretty futile after getting a first down on the Pittsburgh three-yard line. Three times Castiglia tried to bull the ball over and had gained only a yard.

On fourth down they gave to Joltin' Jim for a final try, and he hit into the line again and got nothing—but only temporarily. The Steelers apparently had him stopped cold, and struggling against a massed defense at right guard, but Castiglia's big legs never stopped churning. He bounced off the struggling pile-up and twisted to the outside to fall on his face over the goal line.

That's what Castiglia meant when he said before the game, "Pro football is more fun than college football. The officials don't give you that quick whistle like they give the college boys, and you can keep ploughing as long as you're still on your feet. That's the way I like to play it."

THERE'S A NEW respect for Castiglia among the Redskins. In less than two weeks, with scant grounding in the Redskins' style of play, he's their regular fullback—the man who gives them a semblance of a running game to set the scenery for Baugh's passes. For the fans, too, it's refreshing to see a Redskin back who can carry the ball through the middle and knock somebody down besides himself.

I have a proper respect for Baugh's passing wizardry and it's wonderful to watch—but scarcely all day. I'm old-fashioned enough, I guess, to like it when a guy grabs that ball and goes pounding through the inside—like Osmanski of the Bears and Fritsch of the Packers and Van Buren of the Eagles, and now Castiglia of the Redskins.

Castiglia may not be quite of the class of the others, but the try he gives it is wonderful. He's driven not only by those powerful legs. After the game at Pittsburgh, he said, "I hope those Baltimore people were looking."

Nats Draft Catcher, Infielder And Pitcher

The Washington Baseball Club dipped into the minor league draft grab-bag yesterday and came up with a left-handed pitcher, a second baseman and a catcher—at an outlay of $25,000.

The three players gained by the Nats among the 26 drafted by major league clubs at the Cincinnati session are:

Forrest Thompson, 29-year-old southpaw from Atlanta; Clarence Difani, second baseman, former Yankee property drafted from Newark, and J. Leonard Okrie, catcher from Nashville.

Difani was the most expensive purchase, costing the $10,000 draft price of the International League. He is a 24-year-old 6-footer, weighing 185, who batted .315 for Augusta, Ga., in the Sally League last year. A right-handed hitter, Defani was highly recommended by Scout Mike Martin.

Didn't Play for Newark

Difani did not play for Newark despite the fact he was Newark property. The Yankees put him on their Newark roster and thus upped the draft price to $10,000.

Thompson won 16 games and lost 9 for Atlanta last year, striking out 110 batters. He was recommended by Scout Joe Engel. He's a 29-year-old left-hander, weighing 190.

Catcher Okrie was the property of Nashville but played last season for Fayetteville in the Class B Tri-State League. Like Thompson, $7500 was his draft price. He batted .315 and at 6 feet 1 inch is tall as catchers go. He hits right-handed.

Vice President Calvin Griffith represented the Nats at the draft meeting. Major league clubs can still claim any undrafted talent until the Thursday deadline, and the Nats may be for Garden Gillenwater, Milwaukee outfielder who bats right-handed.

Major league clubs paid $245,000 for the 26 players they selected. Rigid restrictions prevented "raiding" of minor talent. Only one player may be drafted from any one club.

According to the Associated Press, Detroit ran into that barrier as it tried to pick up Clifford Dapper, 27-year-old catcher from Montreal. Dapper batted .291, drove in 105 runs and worked in 136 games for Mobile, Ala., last year and was the loop's most valuable player.

He was one of the choice plums in the draft, but he was saved for his Brooklyn owners through the fact Pitcher Al Gerheauser had been plucked from the Montreal roster by the St. Louis Browns, first choosers.

With Dapper's selection ruled out by Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Detroit joined the champion New York Yankees and the pennant-winning Brooklyn Dodgers as the only clubs not making a selection.

Other selections:

PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES—Walter Dubiel, Seattle of the Pacific Coast League; John Blistnik, outfielder, Baltimore of the International League; Hubert G. Wilson, infielder, Rochester, International League.

WASHINGTON SENATORS—Clarence Difani, infielder, Newark, International League; Forest Thompson, pitcher, Atlanta, Southern Association; J. Len Okrie, catcher, Nashville, Southern Association.

PITTSBURGH PIRATES—Forrest H. Main, Kansas City, American Association; Max West, San Diego, Pacific Coast League; Joseph Kleckley, Birmingham, South Association.

CHICAGO WHITE SOX—Raymond Fletcher, Milwaukee, American Association, catcher; Roman Brunswick, Houston, Texas League, pitcher; James P. Goodwin, Jersey City, International League, pitcher; Alex V. Danellshen, Oklahoma City, Texas League, pitcher.

CHICAGO CUBS—Lloyd B. Lowe, Columbus, American Association, shortstop.

PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS — Don W. White, San Francisco, Pacific Coast League; William DeMars, Mobile, Southern Association, infielder.

CINCINNATI REDS—Ferrell Anderson, St. Paul, American Association.

CLEVELAND INDIANS—William A. Kennedy, Louisville, American Association, pitcher; Leonard Ratto, Portland, Pacific Coast, infielder.

ST. LOUIS CARDINALS—Lawrence Higgins, Minneapolis, American Association.

Red Grange Asks Clarification of 'Extra Man' Rule

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—Harold (Red) Grange, University of Illinois football great and now a radio commentator on the sport, said today that the "extra man" rule which cost Northwestern a 7-6 defeat by Ohio State Saturday should be clarified.

Grange, who saw the game, told the Herald-American quarterback meeting that Center Dick Price was "obviously out of the play" in which head Linesman E. C. Curtiss of Wheaton, Ill., charged Northwestern with having 12 men on the field.

Granke said Price, who had been replaced by Alex Sarkisian, easily could have been off the field before Ohio State got the ball in play, if he had headed straight for the sidelines.

"Instead, he angled off about 30 yards down the field and was about 5 yards inside the sidelines when the ball was snapped," Grange explained.

Taylor Court Clinic Scheduled Tonight

"Chuck" Taylor will appear at the American University gym tonight at 8 p. m. to demonstrate basic basketball fundamentals and ball handling.

Regarded as one of the leading basketball teachers, Taylor's clinic will be held only one night. Members of the American U. basketball teams will demonstrate various techniques under Taylor's guidance. Admission is free.

'Sh-h' Is Watchword at Maryland as Terps Prime Secret Weapon for North Carolina

'Iron Curtain' Hides Workouts

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

SH!!

That was the word at College Park yesterday as Maryland launched preparations for its Saturday outing against North Carolina at Griffith Stadium.

The fenced-in football practice field was guarded almost as closely as Fort Knox. Student managers were everywhere, seeing to it that only those with the blessing of the Terrapin football staff witnessed what was going on behind the barricaded area.

Only the first 20 minutes of the drill, devoted to calisthenics, were open to the public. After that it was a closed affair.

Inside of the secret practice field Coach Jim Tatum and his staff went to work and even nightfall didn't stop them. On went the lights as the squad opened the most intensive week of drills this year.

And what they're cooking up bodes no good for the terrible Tar Heels, if it works. Until 2 p. m. Saturday, when the teams line up for the kickoff, it's got to be a secret.

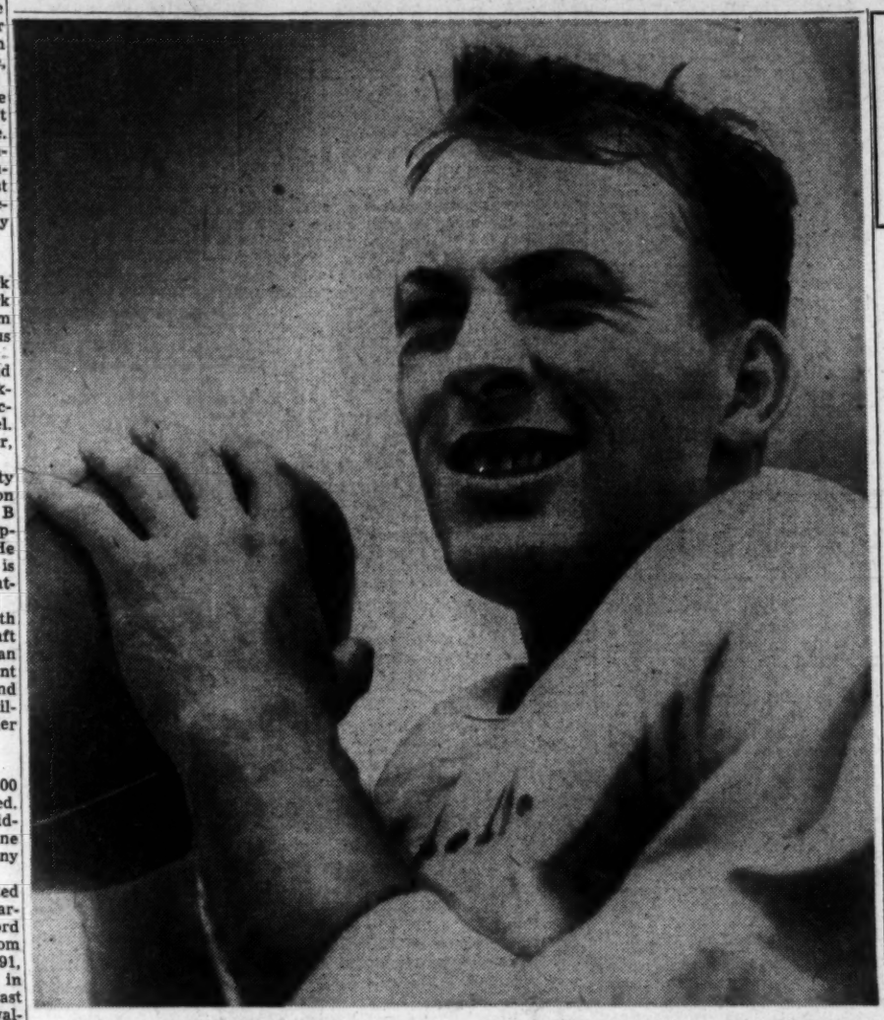
"We've planned this all season for this game," Tatum said. "I hope it works. We're going to give it everything we've got."

The only announcement that Tatum had was that Center Gene Kinney and Quarterback Vic Turyn, two Terp mainstays, had been named team captains for Saturday.

Halfback Huble Werner, out since the Richmond game almost a month ago, was on hand for the session, but he isn't being counted on for service. Left Halfback Johnny Idzik was running in his place in the varsity array which included Turyn at quarter, Harry Bonk at fullback and the irrepressible Lu (Bambino) Gambino at the other halfback spot.

Only Calisthentics Held in Open

Sh! was the word from the field, but the athletic office wanted it known that plenty of tickets are still available. The advance sale has already passed the 22,000 mark, including 9000 students, and a crowd of 30,000 is expected for the tussle.



LOOK OUT, TERPS—Charlie Justice (above) is the man Maryland University's Terps are worried about stopping in Saturday's game with North Carolina University at Griffith Stadium. Justice, one of the Nation's top backs, accounted for two touchdowns last week in the Tar Heels' 41-6 rout of North Carolina State. He gained 123 yards in 14 tries, completed three of four passes and punted five times for an average of 41.2 yards

A Hero?

Doug Turley Is Redskins' Latest Star

By Bill Burnett

THE PLAYER they pulled out of a hat, whose failure featured 3 21-14 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers, was the Washington Redskins' man of the hour yesterday as they faced a bleak 1947 future of five games.

If Doug Turley, 28-year-old end, had snagged a pass in the last three minutes of action Sunday the Redskins might have had a thrilling tie, depending upon the conversion attempt. Then they'd have a record of 2 won, four lost and one tied.

Instead they go into this week's game with the Lions in Detroit with as many defeats as they've ever suffered in a season—five—and don't figure to catch either Pittsburgh or Philadelphia in the eastern division, National Football League, race by winning all their remaining games.

But Turley, obtained by the Redskins in 1943 when the Wilmington, Del., team was disbanded and players' names drawn from a hat by NFL teams, had no apologies for the club's best effort this season, despite the loss. He and his mates did all they could to avert it—except, of course, catch the tying touchdown pass.

THERE WAS exactly 2:55 of the game left when Turley had a chance to fittingly cap his brillance throughout. The Redskins had marched from their own 21, led by Sammy Baugh, Dick Poillon and Jim Castiglia, to the Steeler 7. Poillon's sensational grab of Baugh's toss had covered the last 28 yards.

Castiglia got only two yards in two smashes and Baugh tried a quarterback sneak that reached the two. It was fourth down when Sammy hurled to Turley, who waited patiently in the end zone after taking the few steps from his left end position.

It was a perfect pass and Turley couldn't have missed it if one of the massed defenders arms and the bal lat the critical inhad flashed between big Doug stant. The flicker of Turley's eye caused the ball to flop from his nervous fingers. That was the ball game.

Besides Turley, high praise was as usual due Baugh and such backfield mates as Poillon, Castiglia and Bob Naussbaumer . . . On the line Joe Tereshinski forgot his cracked elbow and played like an All-American, with able assistance from John Adams, John Steber and Ki Aldrich . . . Steber, incidentally, suffered the major injury, administered by Teammate Castiglia as he ploye for one touchdown . . . Six stitches were needed in the big guard's jaw . . . Castiglia, playing his first full game for the Skins, was only 11 trips off the league record for rushing attempts . . . New York's Harry Newman holds that with 39 line smashes for 114 yards in 1934 . . . Jim's only injuries were inflicted by the rubbing on his face of his own head guard and mask . . . Even at 30 he looked ready for another 28 excursions with the ball after the game . . .

Lions Get Defenseman From Hawks

In an attempt to strengthen their lineup and snap a five game losing streak, the Washington Lions have acquired George Hunchuk, 22-year-old defenseman, from the Chicago Blackhawks of the National League.

Hunchuk is flying east from Chicago and is expected to be on hand for tonight's game with the high scoring Indianapolis Capitols of the Western Division.

Another piece of good news is the expected return to action of Larry Archambeault, first string defenseman who has been out of the lineup for more than a week with strained ligaments.

Still on the injured list, however, are the club's two leading point-makers, Scotty Mair and Ken Schultz. Since their absence from the lineup, the Lions have been a badly weakened club. The acquisition of Hunchuk will enable little Walt Babey to move up to his regular wing position.

Indianapolis, now holding second place in the Western half, won eight of 13 games thus far and holds a big margin over every other American League team in scoring. The Capitals have flashed the red light 72 times this season, which puts them 13 goals up on the next highest scorers, Buffalo's Bisons.

Michigan Still Second

Notre Dame Draws 117 of 169 Ballots as Nation's Top Team

By Jack Hand

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Notre Dame strengthened its position as No. 1 college football team of the country by its convincing burst of power against Army according to most of thte 169 writers participating in the weekly Associated Press poll.

Approximately 69 per cent of the voting sports writers ranked the fighting Irish atop the field with 117 of the 169 ballots. A week ago they had drawn 106 firsts out of 186.

Some veteran writers who have been watching football for many seasons ranked the Notre Dame club as the best they ever saw.

Despite the hoop-la surrounding the last meeting of the Cadets and Irish in the curernt series, Michigan attracted 34 first place votes for its 35-0 romp through Indiana, and wound up again as the Nation's second best team.

The Wolverines, who led the pool during early season, head toward one of the toughest tests of their perfect record Saturday when they face an improving Wisconsin team which rocketed into ninth place by a 46-14 rout of Iowa.

Pennsylvania nosed out Southern Methodist for third place although both continued unbeaten and untied by respective wins over previously undefeated Virginia and the sub-par Texas Aggies.

Seven writers tabbed the Penn eleven for first place after its 19-7 conquest of Virginia while two liked SMU for the No. 1 spot off its 13-0 win over the Aggies.

Penn Meets Army

The Quakers take their next-to-last hurdle Saturday when they entertain a subdued Army team which dropped out of the first 10 for the first time in years. The Cadets were ranked thirteenth.

Southern California, 14-0 victors over stubborn Stanford, clung to fifth place and drew five first place ballots while Georgia Tech continued in sixth position despite its close call against Navy, 16-14. The Engineers clash with Alabama figures to be the best game in the South this week.

Texas surged into seventh, pushing unbeaten-untied Penn State to eighth. The Longhorns thumped Baylor 28-7. Penn State which had to go hard in the mud to stop Temple, 7-0, faces trouble ahead in Navy Saturday.

Wisconsin made the top 10 for the first time this season. California regained tenth place when Virginia sunk into the second division by bowing to Penn after a close battle.

On the basis of point score, Notre Dame had 1612 to Michigan's 1628 and the next club, Penn, was over 300 points behind.

How They Rank:

1.	Notre Dame (117)	1612
2.	Michigan (34)	1528
3.	Pennsylvania (7)	1145

Branson played left halfback in Exeter's 12-6 victory over Andover last Saturday. Branson is New England interscholastic high hurdles champion.

Famed Skater Dies

Minneapolis, Nov. 10 (AP).—Oscar Johnson, 51, one of this country's leading speed skaters of three decades ago and later an outstanding skating coach, died at his home Saturday after an illness of two years.

Gambino, Horn Tied in Scoring

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Lucien (Lu) Gambino of Maryland and Darwin Horn of Pepperdine scored three touchdowns apiece last Saturday to continue knotted today for the Nation's collegiate football scoring lead with 84 points each.

Gambino raced against Duquesne for his scores in Maryland's 32-0 win, while Horn got his tripple in a 47-0 rout of California Poly. Both have scored 14 touchdowns—Horn in six games and Gambino in seven.

Gambina has surpassed the 72 figure of last year which led the Southern Conference and which was registered by Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice of North Carolina.

Roy Preston of undefeated Missouri Valley is third, with 81 compiled on 10 touchdowns and 21 conversions.

Wake Forest, Texas Losses Still Rankle Carolinians

By Noel Houston

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 10.—When the big passin' and plungin' team of North Carolina takes the field against Maryland at Washington Saturday, the 35,000 fans expected to be on hand at Griffith Stadium will see a Tar Heel outfit that is still fighting mad about two unexpected doses of medicine.

What Texas (34-0) and Wake Forest (19-7) made the Blue and White swallow before the season was even well under way, disgusted and infuriated Coach Carl Snavely's football elite.

It was all the sports writers' fault, of course, Tar Heel players are college students who can read, and all the newspapers and magazines had said in September that North Carolina was almost a sure thing to go through the season undefeated, and furthermore was a cinch to wind up in one of the better bowls.

Took What Happened!

This seemed like conservative crystal-gazing to the fans—and perhaps to some of the more gullible players, unfortunately — after North Carolina opened the season by taking apart Georgia, its Sugar Bowl opponent last New Year's day.

But then came those two stunning successive Saturday.

The boys were pretty hurt about the Texas game and there was a disposition to explain how the ttam got so airsick flying out to that foreign country that nobody could keep anything on his stomach, how everyone was coughing his head off with a cold, and how unbearably hot it was in that tropical region.

About all that was said after the Wake Forest game was that Halfback Tom Fetzer unsportingly threw too many touchdown passes and the Wake Forest team wouldn't let the Tarheels have the ball long enough to do anything with it.

It was about then anger began usrging in the wide, deep chests of the Tarheel players, and they finally got so mad they ran berserk for three Saturdays in a row, piling up a total of 96 points, while they hustled the ball over and around Florida, Tennessee and North Carolina State.

They're Still Mad

As they started working out today for the Maryland encountertolling under lights after sundown—the North Carolinians showed no sign that their month-long anger was abated.

Once again, as at the season's opening, there is a faint but heady aroma in the air—whiffs of a chance to play in one of those blueribbon New Year's Day games—and Charlie (Choo-Choo) Justice and Co. appear rather hgihly resolved not to let this second chance for the post-season glory be dissipated in Washington's November air.

The Carolina fans, who started out this fall pleasantly persuaded that they had about the best ball club in the country, are once more elevated to that happy state of mind.

The way they are talking in Chapel Hill this week, it will be surprising if a single Maryland player will have been foolhardy enough to stay in the same stadium with the Tar Heels till the end of the game.

Newsweekly Easy Winner of Sagamore Stakes at Pimlico

Equisun 2d, King's Bowl Takes Third

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 10.—Alfred G. Vanderbilt had his colors carried to their second stakes triumph in as many days when Newsweekly, a home bred son of New World and Spot News, easily accounted for the twelfth running of the Sagamore Stakes here this afternoon.

The young member of the host organization's board of directors saw his Halconero, an Argentine-bred, win Saturday's running of the Exterminator.

Newsweekly picked up an easy $7095 in turning back the small field of juveniles. Under a hand ride by Ruperto Donoso, the chestnut colt reached the end of the six furlongs two lengths before Wayne Kendrick's Equisun to take the winner's end.

Brookmeade Stable's King's Bowl was third, beaten a neck for the place, and he was a length ahead of Bobanet Stable's Tenabob. Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Balmoral brought up the rear.

Newsweekly was the first favorite of the day to win. The rangy colt was a strong choice with the 13,402 fans on hand for the last lap of sport at this point and he paid $2.80.

The third race, which drew seven so-called jumpers, found only three of the starters around at the finish of the two-mile course. Picture Prince, carrying the colors of Mrs. Ethel du Pont Weir, was an easy winner by 30 lengths after all the contention was eliminated.

Jockey Charlie Peoples was looking back at the end to see Paper Cutter some 30 lengths away. Abidale, a member of the favored entry which included Bar Ship, was a distant third. Picture Prince returned a $13 mutuel. The running time was 4:23.

Bar Ship, Ducker and Parader fell during the running. Jockey Bobby McDonald, aboard Ducker, fell heavily and injured his collarbone. He was taken to the Maryland General Hospital for further examination.

DEAR FOLKS:

Bowie, the Prince Georges County track, throws open its gates this Friday for a 14-day session. The meeting brings to a close the Maryland fall season. Quite a few innovations will greet the fans. Over $200,000 has been spent in improvements since last spring. While the majority of the innovations are centered in the stabling area the casual racegoer has not been forgotten. In addition to the ever-present paint which is part-and-parcel of every opening, fans who journey to the "oval in the pines" to observe the steeds, will be able to accomplish that deed this year. In past years the field entering the stretch was obscured by a high hedge which bordered the outside rail. According to Frank Cronan, former Washington newspaperman, who is handling the publicity for the track, the hedge has been trimmed to a point where the horses will be visible. In addition, elevated standee bleachers have been installed in front of the grandstand promenade. These five platforms will be a boon to the bettor unable to find a seat. In previous years he experienced difficulty in viewing the races from the standing area. This will be overcome by the new platforms. See you on the rail with the trimmed hedge—BILL.

3 Harness Groups Okayed

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—The State Racing Commission today issued tentative licenses to three groups for 60 days of harness racing with pari-mutuel betting and denied seven other applications.

The three tracks, which will be permitted to have 20 days of racing per year, are:

Laurel Harness Racing Association, north of Laurel on Washington blvd.; Rosecroft Trotting and Pacing Association, Oxon Hill, near Washington, and Ocean Downs Racing Association, near Ocean City on the Eastern Shore.

"The amount of legalized betting must be restricted within sound limits," the commission said in announcing the licenses. The Legislature this year authorized 100 days of harness racing, with not more than 20 to any track, for the first time in Maryland.

One on the Aisle—

The Goldwyn Goose

He's Plucking It Bare in Britain

By Richard L. Coe

AROUND THE WORLD IN 80 SECONDS: Sam Goldwyn, of the independent vocabulary, is feudin', fussin' an'afightin' with British exhibitors just the way he carries on with the boys back home . . . His "The Best Years of Our Lives," best liked of this year's Yank films, is playing to upped prices in London just the way it did here . . . Sam managed to pull that, but his insistence that when the film takes to the neighborhoods it be guaranteed hold-over runs is meeting Rank opposition . . . Rank has a rule that no picture may play a theater more than one week no matter how big a gross it piles up . . . Sam's determined that the picture be kept in theaters as long as the public piles in the £-s-d (pounds, shillings, pence) . . . At its coming convention in Milwaukee the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors is going to be saying mean things about Sam . . . He started the wave of upped prices for big pix that has the theater managers upset . . . "Duel in the Sun," "Life With Father" and "Forever Amber" followed suit and the theaters don't like it any more than you do . . . But they can't run those pictures unless they agree to up the rates.

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA, date lines news from Sibyl Bowan, that incomparable mimic who stops vaudeville shows every time she's on the bill . . . Sibyl's Down Under with her own American revue and, judging from clippings of Sydney and Melbourne papers, is up to her old tricks . . . Sib got the travel bug during wartime USO days . . . Taxes are rugged, reports Sib, 55 per cent of her weekly take going to the government, and of her earnings she can only take out $3200 . . . In Melbourne Sib ran into Lillian Roth, who used to make all those Paramount musicals when Hollywood was learning to talk . . . Lillian's down there with her husband (No. 4), Burt McGuire, and is lecturing in churches for Alcoholics Anonymous . . . Lillian, reports Sib, makes no secret of having been a drunk and now spouts about "The Curse of Drink" to great crowds . . . "I don't think I'd like that type of publicity," muses Sib. "But I could tell about the curse of ice cream sodas and what they do to my figure" . . . Sib's greatest kicks have been an honorary citizenship in Australia's Boy's Town (she's an old friend of Father Flanagan), swimming in fur boots with Bondi Icebergers (dead of winter down there) and a visit from United States Ambassador Butler (he told her he was proud of her).

PARIS: The Left Bank currently is surging 'round Jean Paul Sartre's cafe table with suggestions of French slang for his interpretation of "Anna Lucastra," the Philip Yorden drama . . . Producer John Wildberg has signed Paulette Goddard for the role, originated in New York by Hilda Simms, now playing it in London.

DUBLIN, IRELAND: Three people walked out of Dublin's famed Abbey Theater the other night in protest of the group's "low standards." . . . The play was Sean O'Casey's "The Plow and the Stars." . . . Before the curtain went up on the last act, Dublin Writer Valentine Iremonger got up and addressed the audience: "When Yeats died he left behind him, as a legacy to the Irish nation, the Abbey Theater. Now, seven years after his death, owing to the incompetent artistic policy of the present directors, there is nothing left of that fine glory. Having seen what they have done with O'Casey's masterpiece, I, for one, am leaving this theater in protest." . . . Two others joined him and the show went on . . . It's a story that would have amused the late Dudley Digges, whose death a few days ago leaves the American stage the poorer . . . Digges was a member of the original Abbey Players, along with Sara Allgood, Barry Fitzgerald and T. J. McCormick (the outcast of "Odd Man Out") . . . If the Abbey has lost its standards, the Irish temper remains in Dubliners.

VIRGINIA'S State Board of Censors, in Richmond, has passed "The Burning Cross," that film about the KKK whose withdrawal caused a recent Old Dominion ruckus . . . Screen Guild Productions, which plans on an early Washington showing, states that the "few minor deletions in no way lessen the picture's powerful message."

FROM LONDON comes news of a Washingtonian's command performance . . . He's Johnny Puleo, that wan little guy of the Harmonica Rascals, a vaudeville and revue standby that you've applauded many times . . . Johnny's comedy pantomime is the sort that's good in any language . . . At the Palladium's command performance were the King and Queen, Princess Elizabeth and Lieutenant Mountbatten.

BALTIMORE covered Gertrude Lawrence's arrival Sunday night for "Tonight at 8:30" with all the flavor given a royal procession . . . Gertie, who's agin the long skirt surge, has switched her program . . . Thursday and Saturday nights and Wednesday matinee she'll be doing "Ways and Means," "Family Album" and "Red Peppers" . . . Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday nights and Saturday matinee it's "Hands Across the Sea," "Fumed Oak" and "Shadow Play" . . . See you there.

TOMORROW: Richard L. Coe reviews "Song of Norway," the National's operetta with tunes and inspiration by Norway's composer, Edward Grieg.

COMPOSER GRIEG AND FRIENDS: Sig Arno, Doreen Wilson and Ralph Magelssen in "Song of Norway," which opened a two-week stay at the National last night. Magelssen plays Edvard Grieg, the Norwegian composer, whose music is the background of the popular operetta

Pakistan Hits Indian Move Into Junagadh

New Delhi, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Pakistan government said tonight it had lodged a protest with the government of the Dominion of India concerning the occupation of the state of Junagadh and the assumption of the administrative function.

The Pakistan government said it had demanded that India withdraw its troops from the 4100-square-mile state on the Kathiawar Peninsula and relinquish the administration.

Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India said yesterday his government had taken over the "temporary" administration of Junagadh at the request of the state's Premier, Shah Nawzaz Bhutto, to save it from "a complete administrative breakdown."

Earlier today, S. K. Patil, President of the Bombay Provincial Congress Committe, said India might announce within two weeks a program for conscripting youths between 18 and 21 for military training.

He said conscription might be announced in view of occurrences in the princely state of Kashmir, where Indian troops are battling Moslem tribesmen who invaded Kashmir from Pakistan's Northwest Frontier province. Kashmir has acceded provisionally to India although it is predominantly Moslem.

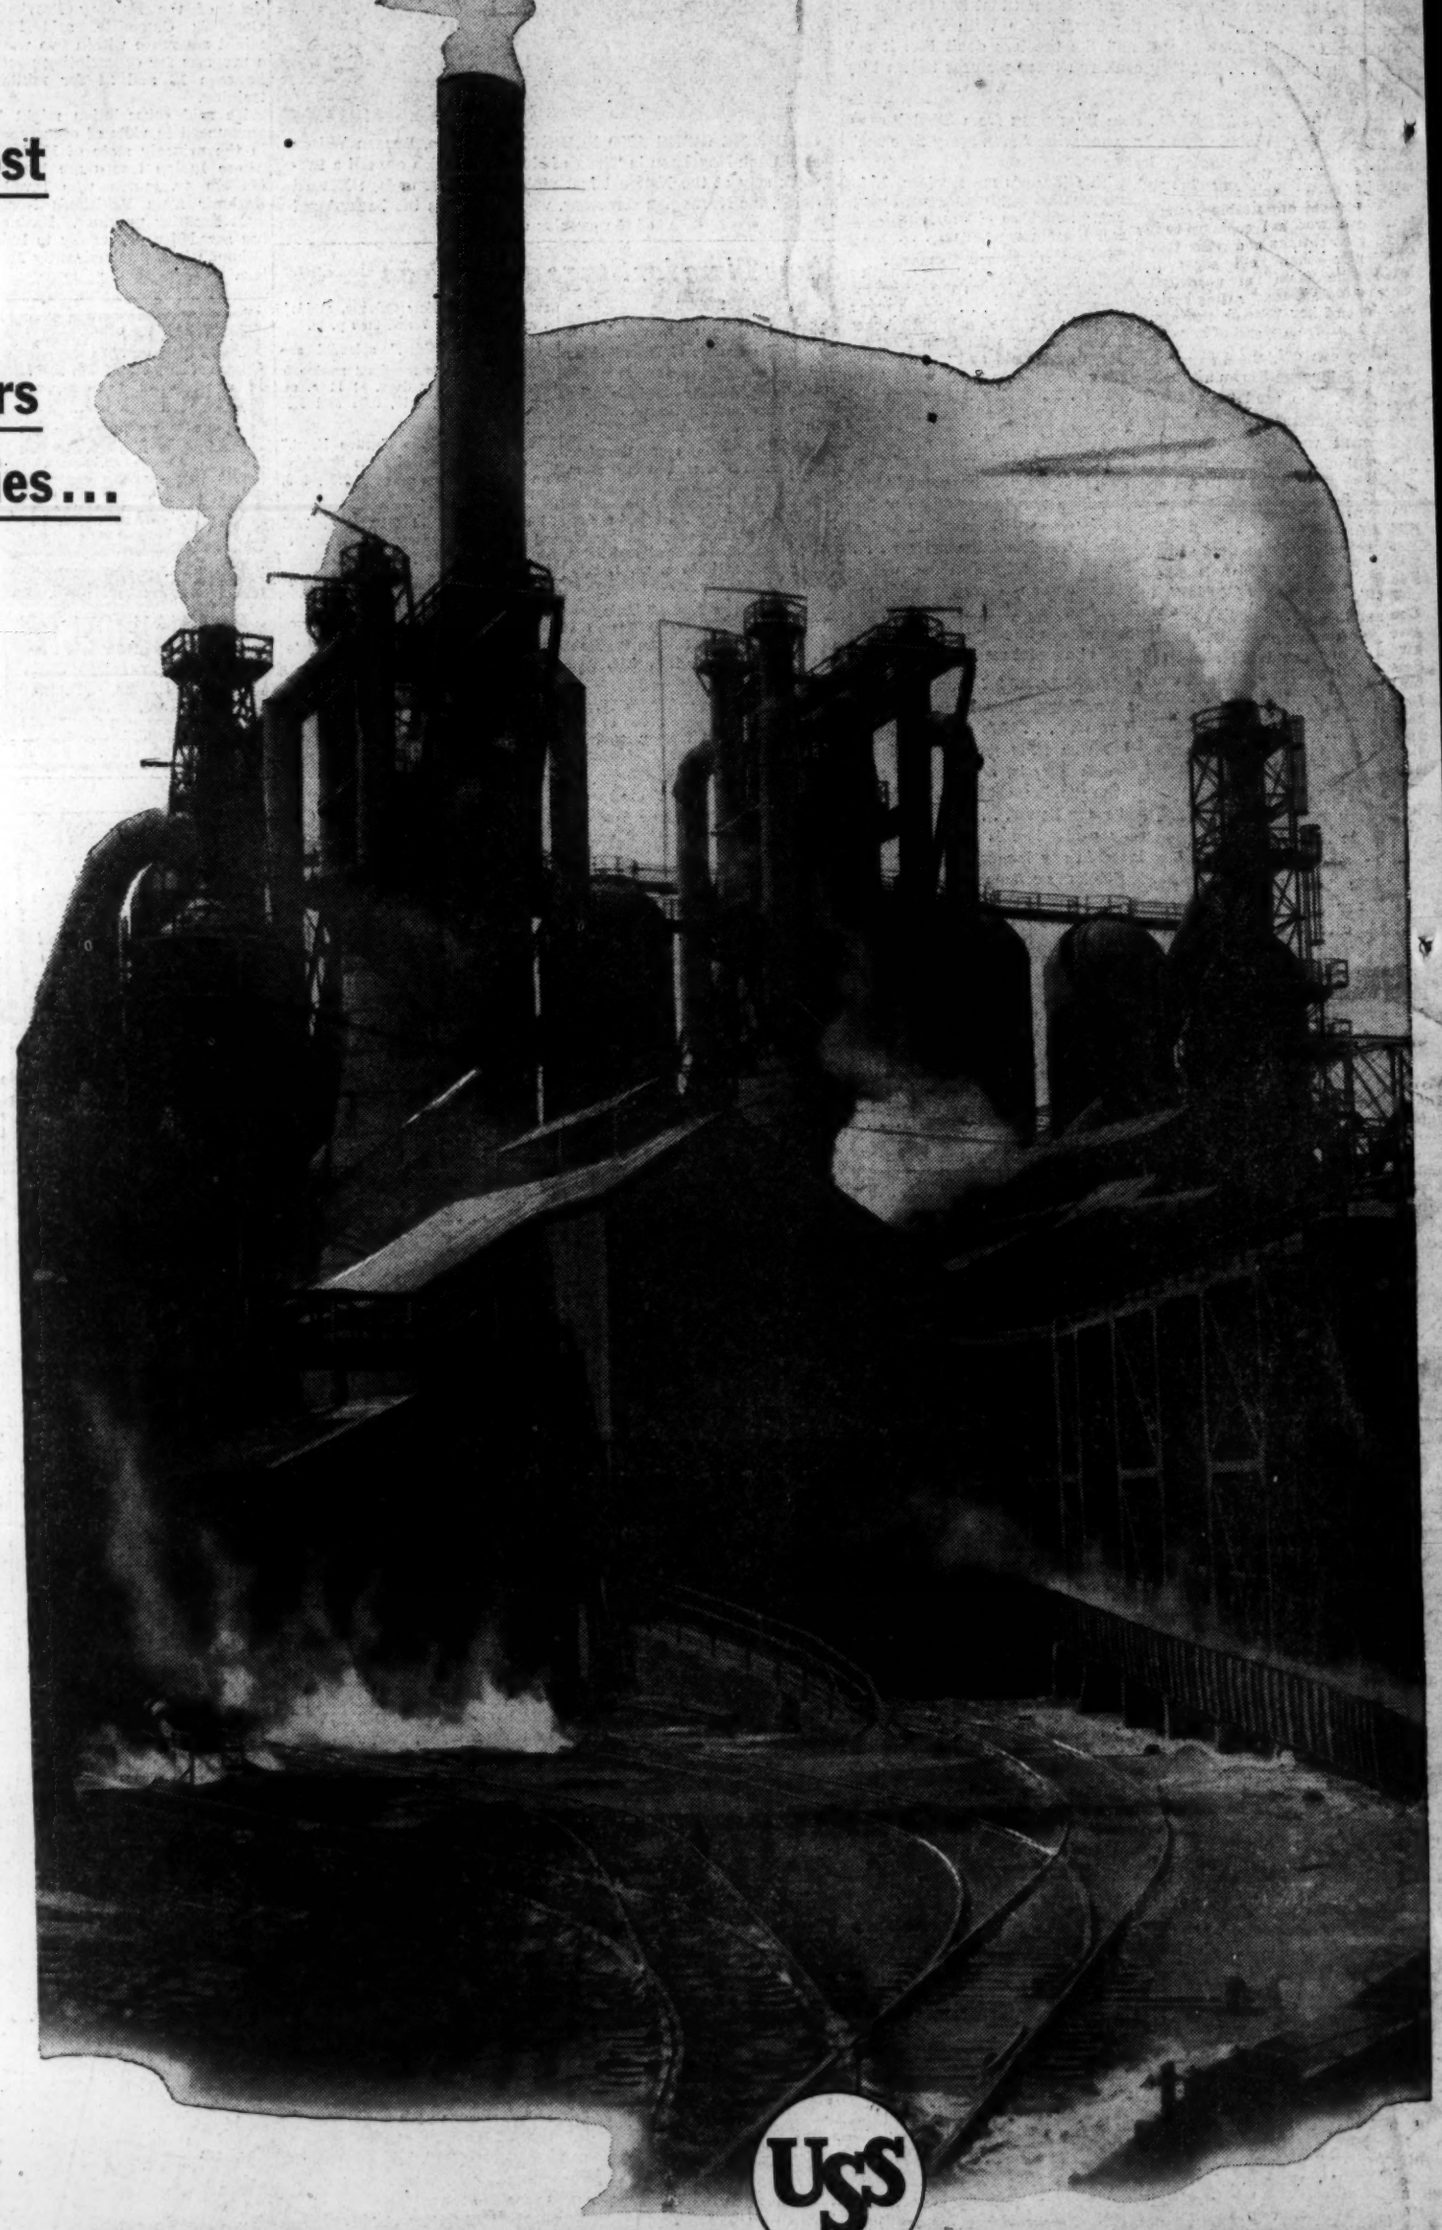
Our half-billion-dollar construction program will help make the steel America needs

New plants and improvements will cost one-half billion dollars...

We've been spending 20 million dollars a month to improve production facilities...

Our peacetime steel production has reached a new high...



THIS YEAR United States Steel will produce 61% more steel than it did in 1939, the last peacetime year before the war. Our operations approach full capacity. Production at that high level is most important today, when demands for steel are extraordinary.

Even with an increase of nearly 2,000,000 tons in steel capacity since 1940, our mills have been strained to supply steel to so many industries for so many things... veterans' emergency housing... emergency freight cars... automobiles ...refrigerators... stoves... wire... pipe... machinery of all sorts, and countless other needs.

An added difficulty in meeting present demands was the industry loss of 18 million tons of steel production resulting from the steel and coal strikes since V-J Day.

The demand for many steel products is temporarily in excess of current supply. But although steel inventories throughout the country are gradually being filled, we are taking still further important steps to increase our capacity to produce the most needed steel products.

Until November 1st of this year U. S. Steel was spending 20 million dollars a month for construction of new production facilities. During the coming months we shall continue to spend more than 15 million dollars a month on this expansion program. We have scheduled improvements and additions costing one-half billion dollars... new blast furnaces... new coke ovens... new sheet mills... new wire mills... new facilities for increased production of steel ingots, tin plate and tubular products.

United States Steel has never failed to increase its facilities to help meet the steel needs of the country. Our steel production is keeping pace with America.

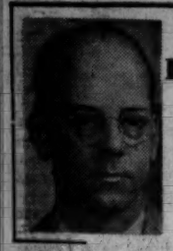
What Am I Saying! — By Frank Morgan: Some children are like flannel — they shrink from washing.

SECTION B



The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Inquiry Is Launched Into Civil Service Examining Methods

STUDY: An inquiry of Civil Service's examination methods is being made by the staff of the Senate Civil Service Committee. The staff is looking into charges that written exams are "tricky, unrealistic, and have little relation to the jobs they are designed to fill."

Specifically, the committee is interested in the conduct of the recent general clerical test. On that exam, 21,000 persons here failed of the 44,000 who took it. The committee also will examine the phone operator test which was given Saturday and which has provoked indignant comments from experienced operators who took it.

On the clerical exam, the committee staff plans to check the grades of employes who took it against their efficiency ratings. As George Riley, the committee's staff director, explained:

"If we find any sizable group of employes who had good or better efficiency ratings and who failed the exam—then we'll know that either the exam was unrealistic, or that the efficiency rating system is bad and that one or the other must be corrected."

PRIVATE: Material in the personnel files of Government workers, both past and present, is supposed to be kept confidential. And it should be.

Talmage S. Wilcher, a Republican, who was defeated for the State senate in last week's Arlington County election, charges the confidence was violated in his case, and that information in his file was used against him in the campaign. He has asked half a dozen Federal agencies to investigate.

Wilcher says the Arlington County Democratic machine was given information that he was given an indorsement by the late Senator Harrison of Mississippi, for a Social Security job in 1937. He claims the information could have come only from his personnel file. An Arlington real estate dealer, Wilcher left the Federal service in 1942.

"I maintain," he said, "that someone went into my Social Security file and dug out this information. The personnel files are supposed to be kept confidential and I intend to fight this violation of my private rights."

Wilcher said he had asked the Social Security, FBI, and Civil Service to investigate and that he would take his case to Capitol Hill and seek a congressional investigation after Congress returns next week.

SUGGESTIONS by employes are paying off in the Federal service. The Budget Bureau has revealed this record of accomplishments made during the 1947 fiscal year to Chairman Wiley of the Senate Judiciary Committee:

The 16 agencies that have employe suggestion systems received 56,728 suggestions and 13,064 were adopted. Cash awards were made to 11,444 employes totaling $428,174. These suggestions will save the Government $16,739,000.

The budget reported that 15 additional agencies planned to start suggestion systems this year, but in that direction. The Budget Bureau placed itself on record as favoring cash awards instead of promotions to employes to make worth-while suggestions.

UPWA has urged the Civil Service Commission to hold public hearings on what it charges as "outrageous discrimination" against Negro employes in the Federal Trade Commission.

Civil Service officials hinted broadly that the request of the CIO public worker union would be rejected. However, they emphasized that appeals from Negroes who are either fired or given poor efficiency ratings by FTC would be handled as individual cases in the usual manner.

The commission has ruled favorably in the cases of several Negroes who have appealed.

UPWA charges that FTC has discriminated against 13 Negro employes who were transferred to it from OPA. It says the efficiency ratings of the 13 have been lowered and the jobs of eight have been abolished.

CIVIL SERVICE NOTES: About 14,600 persons have applied for the junior professional assistant exam, and 4450 applied for the junior agriculture assistant test. For the substitute railway postal clerk test, applications were received from 63,000 veterans. Civil Service had predicted a larger number of applicants for each of the three tests.

DECENTRALIZATION: Several decentralized agencies are returning to this city and others are planning to early next year. Civil Service has handed down an important ruling for the employes of these agencies that were given probational appointments while they were away from this city. It provides:

That they won't be subjected to the State quota system, and that they must merely submit proof of residence in the State in which they claim legal or voting residence.

2 Military Leaders Ask Generous Chest Gifts

Sullivan, Royall Praise Welfare Agency in Messages For Armistice Day

Two military leaders last night hailed the Community Chest Federation campaign and called on Greater Washington residents to give it their "generous" support.

Armistice Day messages lauding the Chest's efforts to rasie $3,900,000 as a means of combatting human misery and want came from Secretary f othe Navy John L. Sullivan and Secretary of the Army Kenneht C. Royall.

"This campagin is our opportunity to extend the fight for freedom of want, and for freedom from fear," Secretary Sullivan declared.

Called Unsurpassed Method

He pointed out that "as a means of meeting demands for welfare and social services, the Community Chset method is unsurpassed." Only "through voluntary and generous contributions to this campaign can all welfare needs of the National Capitla area be met next year."

Secretary Royall expressed the view that "on this Armistice Day . . . all residents of the Nation's Capital will keep in mind the sacrifices of those who died for the principles by which we live."

To "safeguard these principles," he asserted, "we must be constantly alert, not only to the dangers to the Nation itself but also to those conditions which damage or threaten citizens of our Nation.

"I believe there is much now being done to protect our people from want, from disease, from fear of insecurity, through the aid provided by the Community Chests."

Day of Opportunity

Campaign Chairman Edward F. Foley, jr., Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, labeled Armistice Day a "day of opportunity . . . for the public to "share' in making the Nation's Capital a model."

"For some today is a legal holiday, with a chance to stay home and rest," Foley said. "For many it is a solemn day of remembrance of our war dead. For all who live and work in the area of the Nation's Capital, it is a day of opportunity to help those who are unable to solve their own problems alone."

A report of the Government Unit, one of the most important of the nine soliciting groups, will be featured at a Dutch-treat report luncheon at 12:15 p. m. tomorrow in the Chamber of Commerce Building. Campaign leaders have called on each unit to bring in half of their assigned quota of gifts at that time.

Fairfax Rail Span Collapse Suit Reopens

Retrial of a $15,000 damage suit against the Southern Railway Co., resulting from a 1944 bridge collapse in which Robert Hamilton, a Fort Belvoir soldier, was killed, began yesterday in Alexandria District Court.

Hamilton was a passenger in an Army truck which crashed through the Southern Railway bridge at Fairfax Station in Fairfax County.

Mrs. Mary L. Hamilton, of Stanley, Tenn., his widow, charges in the suit the bridge collapsed through the railroad's negligence.

A year ago, Judge John Paul directed a verdict in favor of the company after it contended the truck caused the collapse when it struck a bridge support. The case was sent back for retrial by the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Five witnesses, all passengers in the truck, testified yesterday they had felt no sensation of any kind when the truck moved onto the bridge, and John Hubbard, 16, who said he arrived at the scene shortly after the accident, testified he saw no indication the truck had struck the supports.

Child's Clothing Identified in 1946 Kidnaping

Los Angeles, Nov. 10 (AP).—The parents of Rochelle Gluskoter, 6, whose kidnap-disappearance 20 months ago had never been solved, today identified clothing found with a child's skeleton in nearby Orange County as that of their youngster.

Sheriff's Inspector J. Gordon Bowers said the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Gluskoter, delicatessen store operators, were convinced that remnants of a grey tweed coat and a red and white print dress were that of the clothing their daughter wore when she disappeared February 15, 1946.

A small brown and white saddle shoe also was found with the skeleton. Bowers said the Gluskoters identified its size as apparently the same as Rochelle's but they were not sure it was the child's.

Jail Terms Promised in Assault Cases

Judge Scott Tells Attorney It's Useless To Ask for Fine

Jail sentences are a certainty for defendants found guilty of assault charges in his court, Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott warned yesterday.

His statement, made when 30 weekend assault cases appeared on the docket, answered an attorney's plea that his client be given a fine, rather than a jail sentence.

Judge Scott said "as long as I am on the bench in this court and the facts show a defendant is guilty of sticking or cutting another citizen, I intend to give a jail sentence.

"There is no use for a lawyer or anyone else to ask for a fine."

'Poisons Relations'

Avoid Fear, Hatred, Says Presbytery

The Washington City Presbytery warned yesterday against "hysterical fear of communism," and against suspicion and hatred in international relations.

More than 40 Presbyterian leaders, meeting at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, thus indorsed a similar pronouncement Friday by the Episcopal House of Bishops at Winston-Salem, N. C.

The presbytery adopted portions of the Episcopal resolution verbatim, adding:

"For ourselves, we rightly reject communism as mistaken in theory and often hurtful and oppressvie in practice . . . "

Yesterday's resolution called attention to "the grave dangers involved in widespread fear, suspicion and hatred which poison international relations."

The presbytery also: (1) proposed a drive to stimulate interest of young men in the ministry; (2) recommended increases in ministers' salaries; (3) announced acceptance by the Rev. William H. Kepler, pastor of Catonsville (Md.) Presbyterian Church, of a call to Northminister Presbyterian Church, Alaska ave. and Kalmia rd. nw.; (4) lauded Dr. Wilbur La Roe, jr., of Washington, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, and (5) appointed J. Woman Held In Gallinger Adjudged Sane

Doctors Who Called Mrs. Pearson Demented Overruled by Jury

A Municipal Court lunacy hearing jury yesterday deliberated but seven minutes to adjudge sane a woman who had been pronounced mentally ill by two Gallinger Hospital psychiatrists.

The jury heard Defense Attorney Albert Graham ask that the testimony of the two doctors be "ignored" because their statements were "vague." He asserted "they are too busy to give adequate examinations to mental patients."

The attorney charged that because there are "only four or five psychiatrists" at Gallinger to handle "about 200" mental patients, his client was given "inadequate" examinations.

Graham's client, adjudged sane by the verdict, but still facing an assault charge, is Mrs. Agnes C. Pearson, 47, of 4408 Volta pl. nw., who has been at Gallinger for a 30-day mental observation period.

Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert and Dr. Amino Peretti, Gallinger psychiatrists, testified Mrs. Pearson was suffering from "dementia praecox of the paranoia type."

Mrs. Pearson faces a charge of assault on the 15-year-old daughter of Radio Commentator Fulton Lewis, jr. Testimony during the first hearing October 1 said Mrs. Pearson threw a stick and a stone at Alice Lewis, 4402 Volta pl. nw., as the girl walked her dog.

At conclusion of the hearing, Mrs. Pearson was ordered committed to Gallinger for 30 days. The case reopened Friday; saw Mrs. Pearson on the stand two and one-half hours before adjournment.

Her trial on the assault charge was scheduled for December 5.

N. Y. 'Phone Book' Weighs Four Pounds

New York (U.P.). — Telephone workers have started distribution of 1,200,000 new Manhattan telephone directories, each weighing four pounds.

The new directory, delayed for five months, has 1413 pages, 59 more than the last, and has 565,000 listings, an increase of 3000. Although it is big, it does not exceed the Chicago directory, which has 1736 pages.

Over-all errors, according to Lee J. Jordan, have been shaved down to 0.15 per cent—not one in each 10,000 listings.

Transit Firms Seek Increase In Maryland Commuter Fares

Bus, Streetcar Lines Show Heavy Loss, Is Claim

Commuters from nearby Maryland areas and points as distant as Chesapeake Beach and North Beach, Md., face higher bus and streetcar fares under two separate petitions filed yesterday.

Capital Transit Company here filed a plea with the Maryland Public Service Commission, in Baltimore, for upward revision of its streetcar and bus fares on nearby Washington routes. The company also asked abandonment of its Branchville-Beltsville shuttle line.

The Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis bus line asked authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission here to up its fares some 5 to 15 cents for travel between Washington and the Chesapeake Bay towns.

Zone System Sought

The Capital Transit Co. said its requested fare schedule would place its Maryland operations on a uniform 5-cent cash fare zone system, with each fare zone approximately 1½ miles long. It termed present fares there "holdovers from predecessor companies of Capital Transit."

The company's petition pointed out that losses on its Maryland operations totaled more than $425,000 annually prior to wage increases of 15 cents an hour under the recent arbitration award. It estimated the new fares would yield $275,000 more each year than existing rates.

If permitted, the company would abolish present suburban zone passes, commutation tickets and cut rate single trip tickets now costing riders as low as 2 cents, as well as 10-cent single fares on routes longer than the new zoning schedules.

No Hearing Date Set

The petition asks that the new schedule of fares become effective within 30 days, or not later than December 11. No date had been set for a hearing last night according to Frank Harper, executive secretary of the commission.

Lines affected by the petition include:

Cabin John, Route 20; Loughboro-Chevy Chase bus, D-6; Glen Echo bus, N-8; Kenwood-Edgemoor-Bradley blvd. bus, 0-2; Alta Vista bus, T-8; Connecticut ave. buses, L-6 and L-6 Rollingwood, L-8; Kensington-Silver Spring bus, Y-2; Silver Spring buses, Z-2 and Z-2 Silgo Creek, Z-4, Z-6, Z-8; Piney Branch rd. bus, Y-3.

Takoma bus, T-2 and T-2 Flower, T-2, T-4; New Hampshire ave. bus, K-6; Sargeant rd.-Green Meadows bus, F-6; Queens Chapel bus, G-4; Michigan ave. buses, F-2, F-3; Hyattsville buses, F-8, G-6; Rhode Island ave. car, 82; Beltsville car, 84; Greenbelt bus, G-8.

Prince Georges Community bus, H-8; Riverdale-East Pines bus, H-6; Bladensburg rd., B-2, and East Riverdale-Cheverly bus, B-4 and B-6.

Would Abandon Line

In asking abandonment of the Branchville-Beltsville shuttle line, the company said it had been losing steadily on that operation and that the approximately 350 passengers daily could be serviced by Greyhound buses operating along the Washington-Baltimore blvd.

The W. M. & A. bus company plea to the ICC proposed fare changes to become effective November 23 if there are no protests or suspensions. Some of the increases sought include:

Round trip tickets between Washington and Chesapeake Beach from $1.70 to $2; single fares, Coral Hills and Hillside, from 10 to 15 cents; District Heights, from 15 to 20; Andrews Field, from 20 to 25; Marlboro, from 60 to 70, and Chesapeake and North Beaches, from $1.20 to $1.35.

Transit Firm to Check Transfer Times Closely

A Capital Transit Co. spokesman revealed last night that operators have been asked to "tighten up" on heeding transfer regulations.

E. Cleveland Giddings, vice president, said the utility had not reduced transfer timeallotments, but had urged drivers of buses and streetcars to exercise greater care in examining transfer times.

He said a time limit of not less than 1 hour and not more than 1½ hours is now in effect and has been since 1933. Greater vigilance by drivers was sought as an economy measure, he explained.

Moneybags Stolen

Nine moneybags containing $150 in nickels and dimes and 25 cartons of cigarettes valued at $25 were reported stolen from a Westway Vending Co. truck yesterday by Thomas Reinhart, 5906 63d ave., Riverdale, Md.

Citizenship Guarantee Law Urged

Rep. Klein to Offer Bills to Carry Out Civil Rights Report In Washington

Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) yesterday called for "positive legislation guaranteeing the full rights of citizenship to every resident of the Nation's Capital."

Klein said he plans to introduce bills to carry out the recommendations of the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

These included six major proposals to end what the committee called "intolerable" treatment of Negroes in Washington.

They called for:

1. Ending segregation in District public schools.
2. Ending discrimination and segregation in public and publicly suported facilities.
3. A fair education practices program on admissions to private institutions.
4. A health practices program.
5. Outlawing of restrictive property covenants.
6. Guaranteeing equal access to public places.

Especially Interested

Klein said, that "as a member of the District committee, I am especially interested in the recommendations to introduce real democracy in the Nation's Capital, to outlaw segregation and restrictive covenants and to provide for greater home rule.

"At the present time, a self appointed group heading the so-called Federation of Citizens' Associations is actually running the local government of the District. The undemocratic nature of that punta is shown by recent comments of the retiring president, Clifford Newell."

Newell sponsored a resolution which the Federation approved November 1 saying it resented and deplored misleading and inaccurate statements in the report of the Committee on Civil Rights.

Only Advises, He says

Of Klein's statement, Newell said the Federation does not run the District, it only furnishes advice to the Commissioners and Congress.

"I don't personally know Mr. Klein," said Newell. "I thought I knew most of the members of the District committee, but I don't recall that he has been very active. I'm glad he has finally awakened and is interested in the District. I hope he's going to give us aid on our tax problems and other problems."

Klein is a member of the District fiscal affairs subcommittee that prepared the new District law passed by Congress this year.

Newell said there had been nothing in his talk to the Federation to suggest that he was trying to run the District.

On the question of relations with Negroes, Newell said, "We've always got along well together and I know of no reason we should not continue to do so. We know of no reason why all this agitation is occurring at the present time."

U. S. Has Plan For Germany If Talks Fail

London, Nov. 10 (AP).—An American delegation spokesman at the Deputy Foreign Minister's meeting said today the United States has a plan for a working economic arrangement with Germany in the event of a collapse in the forthcoming German peace talks among the Big-Four foreign ministers.

This plan, the informant added, already has been discussed privately with Britan.

Meanwhile, Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Military Governor in Germany, said in Berlin that Germany was lagging far behind on the road to economic recovery. He said the level of production in Germany for the last half of 1946 was about 40 per cent of that of 1936 and has been raised only a few points this year. Clay said French production in the last quarter of 1946 and January, 1947, was about 90 per cent of the 1938 rate. Belgium has equaled and Norway has surpassed 1939 figures.

U.S. to Insist Reds Give in 60 Pct.

The American delegation at the deputies' meeting was reported to have resolved upon a 60-40 degree of compromise in favor of the United States in any dispute with Russia on the German peace treaty.

The American source said the United States had ended the practice of "one-sided" American concessions in disputes with Russia. He made it clear that a 60-40 arrangement in the opinion of the American delegation, would only partly balance off concessions already made by the United States.

The deputies are deadlocked on such questions as which nations should get seats at a German peace treaty conference. The deputies meet again tomorrow.

Clay's report on German economy pointed out that although the population of "Potsdam Germany" is 98 per cent of that of 1936, territory representing 24 per cent of the total land area and 28 per cent of the arable land of 1936 Germany is under Polish administration or attached to Russia (northern East Prussia). Before the war this separated territory produced about one quarter of Germany's domestic food output.

Can't Support Selves Yet

The report saw "little prospect of the prompt achievement of a self-sustaining economy" for the United States and British zones. Their imports for 1947's first six months totaled $300,000,000—mostly for food—while exports were $66,000,000.

Despite prospective improvements, Clay said, "it is unlikely that exports will reach one-tenth of the $2,000,000,000 which has been estimated as the minimum necessary for a self-sustaining economy."

The report said the "outstanding advantage" of the Soviet over the other zones is that its "agricultural potential is approximately sufficient to take care of its own food requirements."

Exports from the Soviet zone, "negligible in the past," may increase substantially, Clay said, but such a development "will be possible only if reparations out of current production, which absorb the bulk of the shipments from the zone, are greatly reduced, as was promised by Marshal (Vassili D.) Sokolovsky (Soviet military governor) at the beginning of the year."

Silent and puzzled, Sir Hartley leaned over and whispered to Club Vice President Joseph Short, "Who is 'Lilybet?'" Short explained the questioner was referring to Princess Elizabeth.

Lost Richmond Registration Cards Recovered

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—Two hundred and ten registration application cards that were missing in Richmond for last Tuseday's general election finally turned up.

They were snugly sequestered in a little brown cardboard box in a closet used by the general registrar's office.

The city electoral board immediately whipped up an investigation with only a single mystery to solve: How came the cards to the closet?

The disappearing ducats were discovered by C. Herbert Davis, son of General Registrar Vernon Davis, during a search for the cards Saturday.

The registrar called the secretary of the city electoral board and heads of political factions.

The Republican Party's State executive director, Earle Lutz, complained to the electoral board yesterday that (1) absent voter lists weren's posted at all polling places or, if they were, they were improperly posted; (2) official ballots (instead of samples) were circulated in the streets; (3) at least one judge looked inside a voters marked ballot; (4) in several precincts, ballots were not counted in the presence of the judges and clerks, and (5) that ballots were counted in such a way that watchers were prevented from "checking against fraud."

Lutz added he didn't mean to charge that fraud had been committed. He said he thought however, the electoral board would want to tighten up on such things.

Force Is No Good, Won't Keep Peace, Church Unit Told

New Windsor, Md., Nov. 10 (AP). Dr. Frederick Libby of Washington, representing the National Association for the Prevention of War, said today that "no good will come from force, and forceful methods will not preserve peace."

Dr. Libby addressed about 350 persons at an interstate, interdenominational conference at the church world service center here.

Rabbi Abraham Shusterman of Baltimore said the "problem of the Jew is the problem of humanity. We are not solving the problem of the Jew and consequently are not solving the problem of the human race."

Jean Rosselet, professor of French at Goucher College, Baltimore, pointed to her native Switzerland as an example to the rest of the world. The Swiss government treats each minority "on an equal plane," she said.

Australia to Map Domain by Air

San Francisco, (U.P.).—A Radio Australia broadcast heard here tells of a mammoth air mapping project which aims at putting all of Australis's 2,948,000 square miles of territory on photographic negatives.

The project is being carried out by camera-bearing Mosquito bombers which once carried more lethal loads for use against the Japanese in the battles of the Pacific.

Although government sources would not venture a guess as to the length of time required to finish the aerial mapping, one spokesman said that the first 12 months of flying saw 35,000 square miles brought under the lenses.

At that rate, it would take approximately 83 years to get a complete map from the air.

But with the release of more aircraft and the cooperation of the Royal Australian Air Force in the project, the job probably will be finished in a much shorter time.

Montgomery Custom Broken As 20 Women Become Jurors

More than 171 years of tradition were shattered yesterday as 20 women jurors were sworn in for the November term of the Montgomery County Circuit Court.

The break in the all-male jury tradition resulted from a law passed at the last regular session of the Maryland General Assembly authorizing women jurors.

Judge Stedman Prescot officially welcomed the women to the jury box, telling them they would be the first in the county's history to pass judgment on persons charged with crimes.

Of the 20 women called, 13 were assigned to grand jury duty. Seven were assigned to petit juries to serve with 17 men.

Andrew J. Kessinger, Silver Spring real estate man, was selected as foreman of the grand jury, which is expected to deliver its indictments to the court on Friday. State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson said only eight of the 60 docketed cases were considered by the grand jury yesterday.

In explaining grand jury duties to the new jurors, Judge Prescott cited a recent report by an Arlington County (Va.) grand jury on gambling activities. The report was refused by Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

It was the duty of a grand jury to investigate the commission of crimes, the Montgomery jurist declared, but it does not have authority to bring in general reports criticizing county officials.

Mary Haworth's Mail

An Upper Bracket Student in High School, Girl's Marks Drop in College; She Feels Vaguely That Best Friend Figures in This

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a sophomore in college, 18 years old. In high school I was always in the upper third of my class, scholastically; but now I am making just average marks, and I know I am capable of better.

Lately, when we have a written test my mind becomes a blank. Even though I've just studied the answers to questions asked, I can't remember what I read.

I think this ties in with the fact that I become very reserved when meeting certain people or talking to certain friends. At such times I suddenly start to mispronounce words and forget what I intended to say. This doesn't always happen, but it has been more frequent recently.

My best girl friend at college is in all my classes. This was her idea. If I undertake anything, she has to do it, too. She is quite efficient and never at a loss for words. I don't know if she has any bearing on my problem, but usually if someone addresses us, I let her reply.

Tries to Evade Friend's Demands

IT BOTHERS Clare terribly if I do my homework ahead of her, or study something she hasn't. Since she isn't a person who always does her homework, she has a great tendency to borrow mine or someone else's. Lately, I either don't do my homework, or I tell her I haven't, just so I won't have to give her my notes.

I think I am acting very childish, but I can't bring myself to act otherwise, though I've tried several times. Outside of school, Clare is swell and I find we get along very well. Please try to advise me how to regain self-control and concentration in these matters.

I would like to consult a psychiatrist but I can't afford it; and I haven't discussed the problem with my parents or sister, as they would simply say, "Well! Don't act that way." Sincerely yours,

N. C.

So-Called Friend Is Envious Rival

DEAR N. C.: It seems to me you are intuitively aware of various unpleasant truths about Clare which you haven't admitted to conscious mind and squarely faced.

As I get the picture, you have attributes which Clare envies. Doubtless you are naturally superior to her in some respects—possibly in native intelligence, perhaps also in civilized quality. She on the other hand is aggressive and ambitious, shrewdly determined to make maximum worldly showing with her comparatively mediocre equipment.

Though ostensibly your friend, she is rather a rival and adversary—jealous, competitive, domineering, piratical by tendency—who preys upon your assets even while trying to clip your wings and in general establish herself, by surface rating, as your equal or better, scholastically and socially.

Since coming under her influence, you haven't been yourself, as the saying goes. Your initiative, buoyancy and spontaneity are under eclipse, due to your half-obliging, half-resistant reaction to her insidiously demanding, discouraging, circumventing tactics.

Mind, Emotions Are in Deadlock

YOUR neglect of homework, also your fibbing on that score, are unconsciously motivated forms of resistance, and this negative performance on your part leads to unconscious guilt and anxiety, which in turn sparks a chain reaction of terrific unconscious resentment beamed at your so-called best friend—for pushing you to such extremes.

Truth is, you're letting yourself be pushed around by Clare, on the surface and subjectively, because you attach undue importance to bosom companionship with her, and you think this is the price you must pay for it. That's foolish.

For advice: Respect and protect your rights to individuality. You're not Clare's identical twin, stooge or handmaiden. Let that be understood. Act on that premise and your head will clear. Speak for yourself socially and let her shift for herself scholastically. You don't owe her the fruits of your homework nor any apologies for forging ahead by private digging. And if this causes a supposedly fine friendship to wither, it will simply mean that Clare can't conform to upright behavior: M. H.

Schwellenbach Tells Negro Women:

Employment Prospects Bright, But Fight Discrimination Now

By Genevieve Reynolds

Now is the time to do an educational job on employers to try to persuade them to eliminate discrimination in plants and factories. Employers will be less prone to listen when there are more workers than jobs. This is the advice the Secretary of Labor, Lewis B. Schwellenbach, gave yesterday to the 800 delegates attending the opening session of the National Council of Negro Women's twelfth annual convention here in the Department of Labor Auditorium.

"In this," said the secretary, "the Department of Labor will be behind you, working with you and for you."

Commenting on the general employment outlook in the country, he predicted that the high employment level "is apt to continue." He based his predictions on reports to the United States Employment Service and surveys conducted by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"The Public Employment Service offices have had more than four million job placements in the first nine months of this year," he explained. "The total since V-J day is almost 15 million and today there are two-score labor market areas in the country experiencing actual shortage of workers.

Propects Bright

"From this I think the prospect for employment opportunities for all minority groups are bright," continued the Secretary. "I believe new fields of employment for Negro women will be continually opening. And I dare to predict that at long long last, the freedom and democracy for which America stands throughout a troubled world will come to reality at home."

Secretary Schwellenbach reminded his listeners that democratic governments have been subdued in many parts of the world and that the American ideal of government is under assault in many parts of Europe as well as in the Mediterranean and throughout Asia, by those who would supplant the dignity of mankind with the dictatorship of the State.

"These things are of concern to every American," declared the speaker. "I know that they are deeply significant to you because under such a system all the rights that inure to free mankind would be destroyed. Inevitably if their forces are victorious, minority groups as others, would lose the bright promise of today. Slowly but surely, in America the concept of individual freedom and equality for all citizens, which set our Constitution apart, is approaching reality."

Pointing to the report given by the President's Committee on Civil Rights, he said that it gives tangible results of the growing conviction in America that the rights to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness belong equally to minorities as well as to majority groups within our population.

Dr. Bethune Speaks

Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, founder and president of the NCNW, was the principal speaker at the night session which was dedicated to presidents of the 24 affiliated national organizations.

Dr. Bethune said that the council is ready to accept the challenge created by tremendous national and international problems such as aid to Europe and world peace.

A forum on employment, health and fund raising will be the main events on the council's program today, which will be held at Shiloh Baptist Church, 1500 9th st. nw., due to the fact that the Department of Labor auditorium will be closed for Armistice Day. Convention programs will be resumed in the auditorium tomorrow.

City Club Fetes Chilean Attache

Latin American goodwill permeated the atmosphere at the Women's City Club yesterday when tiny, vivacious Senora Lilly Perez-Freire de Besa, newly appointed cultural attache of the Chilean Embassy, met some of the Capital's leading clubwomen at a reception given in her honor by the Pan-American Liaison Committee. Fall flowers decorated the large reception hall.

In a brief talk the attractive, dark-haired attache-designate outlined her plans for fostering cultural relations between Chile and the United States and expressed her enthusiasm in cooperating with the women of this country. She also emphasized the importance of cultural relations in cementing friendship between countries.

Daughter of the Chilean composer, Osman Perez-Freire, often referred to as the Stephen Foster of Latin America, Senora de Besa herself is a composer and singer of note. Yesterday she delighted those at the reception by singing a group of South American songs, including the popular "Ay-ay-ay" composed by her father. She was accompanied at the piano by her countrywoman, Mrs. Thomas Burke. Senora de Besa succeeds Senora Carmen Senoret, former cultural attache, who was appointed Chilean Minister to The Netherlands.

Sharing honors were wives of members of the Latin American diplomatic corps, who took turns serving tea and coffee with wives of United States Senators and State Department officers.

Tea hostesses included Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran Ambassador; Senora de Mora of Uruguay, Senora de Fernandez-Davila of Peru, Senora de Drago of Argentina, Senora de Baron of Cuba, Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Mrs. Owen Brewster, Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. J. W. Fulbright, Mrs. Robert A. Knowlton, Baroness von Schoen, Mrs. Paul Magnuson, Mrs. Blanche Main, Mrs. Robert McClintock, Mrs. Cecil Burton Lyons, and Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. John T. Lucker, president of the club, received the guests, assisted by Mrs. Burke, chairman of honor guests, and Mrs. Benjamin Karpman, chairman of hostesses. Assisting with arrangements were Mrs. Mario Julia, Mrs. Rene J. Taylor, Mrs. Elsa Morales, Mrs. Javier Cerecedo, Miss Helen Hoffman, Miss Miriam Fleming, and Miss Rena Pond.

Teodoros Hosts At Dinner Party

Miss Blackistone, Fiance, Honored

ANOTHER event in the whirl of pre-nuptial parties for Miss Anne-Woodall Blackistone and Stewart Labat, who will be married Saturday in the Church of the Epiphany, was the cocktail party given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Forrest F. McCluney. Guests who climbed the long flights of stairs to the McCluneys' third-floor studio apartment at 1722 H st. nw. found themselves in a charming setting of bronze and yellow chrysanthemums and soft candlelight.

Among those invited to drop in between 6 and 8 were the bride-elect's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Blackistone, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Farris, visiting here from California; Maj. and Mrs. Robert C. Women's Action Committee Fights for Peace by Keeping Americans Informed on U. N.

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THERE'S NO MORE fitting occasion than Armistice Day to mention the Women's Action Committee's membership drive. The committee works uniquely for world peace through the United Nations. The committee's function is to bridge the public opinion gap between the U. N. and Congress. It translates U. N. policies into everyday practicality, works to help activate them through congressional legislation.

The most important U. N. measures cannot become effective unless they are backed by the American public which works through Congress. The common sense Women's Action Committee setup keeps women informed through groups organized in every congressional district.

Affiliated is a wide variety of feminine organizations such as the Y. W. C. A. and the Needleworkers' Guild. Backed by these powerful groups, Congressmen have to respond when the W. A. C. pushes an issue.

Here, in the Capital, the committee keeps a finger on Congress' pulse through a legislative committee. "Inside" information is circulated via a bulletin, "Call for Action." Other trained observers corral dope on international subjects, keep tab on congressional voting, tell women the propitious time to write their Representatives.

Lillian Mowrer, journalist and prime mover in women's affairs, heads up the Washington committee. In New York the top ladies include Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Ogden Reid, Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick and the Foreign Policy Association's brilliant Mrs. Vera Dean.

NEWEST WHITE HOUSE AIDE is genial Lieut. Col. Godfrey McHugh. A bachelor, he's been sharing an attractive Georgetown house with two fellow officers . . . Last week, Raymond Guest, brother of polo star Winston Guest, was elected to the Virginia Legislature. To combat campaign fatigue, he'll go hunting in wildest Canada . . . Is Arthur Gardner, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, about to become an Ambassador in some eastern European country?

THE ROBERT WOODS BLISS will sail back from Europe December 4. Right now they're in Athens, presumably selecting treasures for Dumbarton Oaks. The Dumbarton Oaks Friends of Music will give their first concert that same date. Established last year to carry on the Bliss' musical tradition, such stellar attractions as Igor Stravinsky made the concerts outstanding. This year they're starting off with Bach's Brandenberg concerti. There's room for only 200 in the Dumbarton Oaks Music Room.

LADY "PATSY" WARD, journalist sister of the Earl of Dudley and relation-by-marriage of the New York Herald Tribune's Ogden Reid's, is the new circulation manager of the Chronicle, that excellent hunting, riding, horsey weekly which Stacy Lloyd edits.

Etiquette For Official Kissing

ONE OF THE most glaring deficiencies in American social deportment is a total inexperience in social and official kissing! Most American women feel a bit silly when a foreigner kisses their hand, but those, both ladies and gents, who recently were kissed officially underwent the ordeal rigidly and with scant grace.

The official kissing bee took place when the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, decorated 26 men and 2 women with the Legion of Honor. Part of the ritual is a noncommittal buss on each cheekbone. M. Bonnet had no trouble with the men. Frozen-faced, they stood stiff as pokers when the Ambassador accorded the traditional embrace.

But the two women, Mrs. Ogden Reid of New York's Herald Tribune and Mrs. George Worthington, jr., who's cochairman here of American Aid to France, presented a problem. Both are short, M. Bonnet tall. Mrs. Reid complicated matters by wearing one of her famous toques which covers one side of her face from cheekbone to chin. Neither lady moved a muscle and only such an experienced man of the world as M. Bonnet could have planted a second kiss on Mrs. Reid without hitting either eye, nose or chin!

By Charles DelVecchio—The Washington Post

Paris fashions were undoubtedly the subject of discussion when these two countrymen met at a United Nations Club party. At left Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador and Pierre Balmain, one of the designers who initiated the "New Look"

Designer Pierre Balmain Says:

Paris Created 'New Look' But Americans Made It a Fad

By Peggy Preston

PARIS may have created the "New Look," but it took America to make it a universal fad.

So said one of France's famous, young designers, Pierre Balmain, who stopped in Washington yesterday, en route to Paris from Australia.

Good-humored Mr. Balmain, who looks more like an ex-football player than a dress designer, accused Americans of actually "over-doing" the "New Look." At a party given for him by Julius Garfinckel & Co., at United Nations Club, the husky Frenchman told members of the press that American women have taken the new styles too literally. We're dropping our skirts too rapidly and using padding over our hips without justification.

The Difference

"But that is the difference between your country and mine," said Mr. Balmain. "In Paris we design a good dress for a few women. Here, three months later, a version of the same dress is selling for $29.50, and everyone is wearing it whether it is becoming or not."

Mr. Balmain believes that the "New Look" has a long way to go before it becomes stabilized. Next year our clothes will be more attractive than they are now, for by then many of the elaborate ideas it now incorporates will be discarded. Bustles, drapes, heavy padding—all of these will go unless used for a good reason.

As for his own designs: "I create my clothes so that they can be worn and lived in and enjoyed; I do not make extravagant, exeggerated, theatrical clothes which are hard to get into and hard to get out of. Clothes should be lovely amusing and new and elegant. And they must be feminine."

Mr. Balmain declared that the important thing a woman must remember is not whether she is obtaining the "New Look" but whether she herself is looking her best.

"The woman is more important than the dress. I like people to be conscious not so much of a beautiful dress as of a beautiful woman. Therefore the wise woman dresses simply and with elegance. She keeps her waistline slim, wears her hair up on her head and never, under any circumstances does she use jewelry without discrimination."

THE weekly fashion show luncheon attracted a large crowd t othe Mayflower Lounge at noon yesterday and several hostesses chose the occasion to entertain groups of friends.

At a table for eight, Mrs. Blake Clark entertained in honor of Authoress Marjorie Putnam Sinclair, wife of Gregg M. Sinclair, president of the University of Hawaii, who arrived in the Capital Sunday.

Another hostess was Mrs. Randolph Huntington Milner, who presided at a table for six.

Round 9—Mr. and Mrs. Reducing Bout

Bends for the Beltline

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S A well-known fact that woman's waist diminishes to fit the current styles, but that man's expands steadily in a horizontal line.

A corporation front is the penalty of excess fat and flabby muscles plus gravity. You know the cure: steer clear of belt-bulging meals and too many spirited beverages and exercise and thus put some tone back in the muscles that form the abdominal wall. Before you wrestle with calisthenics, however, drop into the doctor's office and get your blood pressure checked. If it's up and your weight is too, the diet is just what he'll order; but also follow his advice as to whether or not you should take exercise.

If you're a bit rusty, here are beginning conditioners:

Exercise 1. Position: Lie flat on back on floor, knees bent, soles on floor, arms down at sides.

Movement: Flex one knee and bring it vigorously toward chest, pressing small of back into floor by pulling up and in firmly with abdominal muscles, as arms are raised and stretched back on floor overhead. Repeat 6 times, later 12, later more.

Exercise 2. Position: Lie flat on floor, legs straight down and together.

Finland Decorates Red Cross Leaders For War Services

In an afternoon ceremony held yesterday at the home of the Minister of Finland, Dr. K. T. Jutila, decorations of the Finnish Red Cross were awarded to Basil O'Connor, president of the American National Red Cross, and to a group of other American Red Cross officials. Dr. Jutila made the presentations in the presence of Col. G. Taucher, secretary-general of the Finnish Red Cross.

The insignia were bestowed by the President of Finland in appreciation of the recipients' outstanding activities since the war of 1939-40 for the benefit of the Finnish Red Cross, as well as the whole population of Finland.

To Mr. O'Connor went the Cross of Merit, while the Silver Medal of Merit was received by the following: James T. Nicholson, Dr. G. Foard McGinnes, Livingston Blair, Dr. Warren Draper, Dr. Edward A. Richards, Mrs. Alice I. Thornton, Philip E. Ryan, Melvin A. Glasser, Miss Dagmar Johnson, John J. Gusek, and Presnell K. Betts.

Greek Policy Discussed by Dr. Vlavianos

"We cannot fight communism in Greece with kings, guns and empty words . . . not even with dollars."

This opinion was voiced yesterday by Dr. Basil Vlavianos, speaker at the weekly luncheon of the National Democratic Woman's Club, who pointed out mistakes in United States foreign policy in Greece and made a plea for scientific thought in foreign political problems.

In a forthright discussion of the Eastern Mediterranean, Dr. Vlavianos, currently professor at New York University's Institute of Public affairs and Original Studies, regretted that the Greek royal family had been returned to power but declared that it was still possible to give Greece a democratic form of government. He cited Norway, Sweden and England as examples of democracy under a king.

Lashing at tactics employed by Fascists and Communists, Dr. Vlavianos also warned that every misstep in our foreign policy provides grist for the communistic mill.

The solution to world chaos, he suggested, lies in a democratic world federation, headed by a man acceptable t oall. With the United States leading the way, he predicted even Russia would fall in line.

Mrs. Norman Littell, program chairman, introduced the speaker.

How Dr. Edwards' Helps Folks Who Are Constipated

For over 40 years, Dr. F. M. Edwards, a noted Ohio Doctor, successfully relieved patients bothered by constipation and its headaches, lack of pep, dull eyes, sallow skin, with his famous Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

Olive Tablets are purely vegetable. They work gently but oh—so thoroughly! Olive Tablets pep up a sluggish intestinal tract. They act on BOTH upper and lower bowels. Your Questions On Homemaking

What is the best method of removing formula stains from baby's shirts and nightgowns? I have tried soaking them in bleaching solution but was unsuccessful. N. H. P.

You may not have much success removing the formula stains since they have been washed. You might try this: Sopnge the spot with carbon tetrachloride. Dry thoroughly, wash and rinse in warm water and dust with pepsin powder. Work pepsin into the cloth and let stand 30 minutes or longer and then wash.

Could you explain how I could make my own transfers from my designs? I would like to use them for embroidery and applique on children's clothing. I. M. W.

There are several ways that designs can be transferred to cloth. For transparent materials, pin the material directly over the design or drawing and trace it directly on the material with a pencil. For heavy and coarse materials, trace the design on tissue paper and tack it to the material. The design is then outlined by running stitches through the paper and the material and then the paper is torn away, leaving the design outlined in stitches on the material. In the "Embroidery Book" by Mary Thomas, published by Morrow, you will find other transfer methods discussed in more detail.

How can I wash feathers from two pillows (bed size) without ruining them? Can they be placed in an automatic washing machine that runs for about 15 minutes before it begins its wringing process? What method do you suggest for getting the feathers clean? M. R.

Since washing feathers removes the natural oil from them so that they break easily and are not so fluffy it should be undertaken only when the feathers are so soiled they are of no further use as they are. Many times the odor, which causes one to think the feathers soiled, is caused by a soiled ticking. Before washing, I would suggest transferring your feathers to another bag, more porous than the ticking and twice as large. To transfer the feathers, sew the openings of the two bags together so that you can shake the feathers from one to the other with none escaping. Now, air the feathers in the larger, porous bag for a day at least. Pick a windy, sunny, dry day for this. At the end of the airing period you will be able to determine whether this has been sufficient to freshen them. If so, wash the ticking or provide new ticking and return the feathers to it in the same way as they were removed. If the feathers do not seem fresh after airing, wash them without removing from the large bag. I would suggest washing them gently by hand, squeezing the suds through them. Rinse and hang on the line in the bag to dry, punching the bag occasionally during the drying process to fluff them. You will find your problem much simpler if you wait for bright, low humidity weather to wash them. Even in such weather it sometimes takes two or three days to thoroughly dry feathers in a bag. Be very sure they are thoroughly dry before putting them into the ticking.

I have a shortage of cups and dinner plates in my china and have been unable to find more. They are marked "Empire-Shelton Ivory, England," and are ivory in color, with a half inch Cobalt blue edged in gold. I wonder if there is any reader of your column who has odd pieces of this china she would like to sell? H. J.

How about it, readers? Any extra pieces of Empire-Shelton Ivory?

Will you please give instructions on how to make a glazed finish on top of home-made fruit cake? Mine is always dull looking on top. T. H. E.

There are several ways to make a glaze on a fruit cake. One is to brush the top of the freshly baked cake with melted jelly. Use about a fourth of a cup for one three-pound fruit cake. If you're decorating the top with blanched almonds and candied fruit, brush the top with the jelly first, then decorate. Run the cake back into the oven for about 15 minutes to set the glaze. Another simple way of glazing is to make a syrup of equal amounts of corn syrup and water. Boil syrup vigorously two minutes, then brush it on the cooled loaves while the syrup is still hot. Decorate the fruit cakes, then lightly brush the decoration with the hot glaze.

Among my early Morning woes
Are holes in all
My stocking toes!

Go after them, Petunia!—Holes can grow up into runs, fast. To prevent it, paint a line of colorless nail polish about one inch from the toe top. Stops runs, and lasts practically forever.

Bishop-Bracken

I have a pink hydrangea which is large and about 10 years old. It never has had over two blooms a year. Can you tell me the reason and what I can do about it? Also, I have a 5-year-old peony that comes up, grows large foliage, but never blooms. Can you tell me why? C. W. P.

This column doesn't ordinarily answer garden questions, but I have consulted James H. Beattie, garden expert, on this one. He says it's likely the trouble with both plants is too much shade. Hydrangeas require plenty of sunlight, and so do peonies. If they're in a shaded place, moving them to a sunny spot should be helpful. The trouble with the hydrangea might also be due to improper pruning, lack of fertilization, or being located too close to trees or other shrubs that rob it of sustenance. The peony may be crowded by grass roots or other plants and need cultivation and fertilization. Mr. Beattie suggests that next spring you cultivate around it and fertilize it well. It may take a year or two for it to stage a comeback, even though you keep it cultivated.

Children Education Needs Stressed

The education committee of the American Association of University Women, Washington Branch, will have a busy season this year if the speech given yesterday by Miss Christine M. Heinig is any indication.

Miss Heinig, newly appointed childhood education associate for the AAUW, spoke at a tea in the clubhouse in observance of National Education Week. She pointed out "areas of need" in childhood education, suggesting to the group the following three major study projects:

1. An analysis of ways to increase teachers' salaries (Miss Heinig told how the recent pay increases have already been overshadowed by the steep rise in cost of living).

2. An investigation into possibilities of centralized preschool-age child care, and

3. A study of the amount spent for the care of neglected children, particularly in comparison with the cost of contributing to support of needy children before their situation becomes critical.

Md. Measure Gives County Gaming Vote

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—Governor Lane signed today a measure providing for a voters' referendum on whether coin gambling machines should be legalized in St. Mary's County.

The Governor vetoed several similar slot machine proposals for various counties, including St. Mary's, last spring with the notation that he was opposed to licensing of such gambling activity. The issue was particularly heated in St. Mary's County, where anti-gambling forces have crusaded against "flagrant" violation of gambling law.

"I have today signed Senate Bill No. 36 to provide for licensing of slot machines in St. Mary's County," Governor Lane said.

"It will be recalled that I vetoed somewhat similar measures for St. Mary's and other counties after the regular session of the 1947 General Assembly.

"Senate bill No. 36 is in effect an appeal from my action at that time.

"Since it submits to a referendum the question of whether the county commissioners of St. Mary's County shall, by resolution, designate the type of coin-operated machine upon which a gross receipts tax has been imposed by the county, and charge a license fee thereon, I have signed the measure.

"I do not believe it would be proper exercise of my veto power if I withheld from the voters of St. Mary's County the right granted by action of the General Assembly, to determine this question."

Among the 79 bills and three resolutions of the special session of the Legislature signed by Governor Lane today were:

HB1—Reducing to one year the residence requirement for assistance to the blind and providing for elimination of the provision if necessary to receive Federal aid.

Sales Tax Bill Becomes Laws; Gov. Lane Signs 79 Measures

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—The amended Sales Tax Act, rising the exemption level from 9 to 14 cents, became law shortly before 1 p. m. today when Governor Lane signed the bill passed by a special session of the Maryland Legislature last week.

The Governor, flanked by House and Senate officials, singed 79 bills and three joint resolutions, but vetoed two local measures. All were passed at the three-day session which ended early Saturday.

One bill killed would have permitted licensed clubs in Allegany County to serve liquor between noon and 6 p. m. and 9 p. m. and midnight on Sundays.

The other would have provided pensions for widows of Hagerstown policemen up to 50 per cent of the officers' retirement pay.

Sales Tax Provisions

The amended Sales Tax Act, which was passed after battles in Senate and House, confines food exemptions to food bought for home consumption only. It also stipulates that sales of tangible personal property in any quantity are subject to the tax.

As soon as the Sales Tax Act was signed, State Comptroller James J. Lacy was advised and he was directed to notify all merchants.

Food, such as lunches and sandwiches bought for consumption off the premises, had been exempted from the tax under the original act passed by the Legislature last spring.

Baltimore Bids Signed

Three major bills affecting Baltimore City also were signed in the presence of Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro. One extends the city's taxing powers for four years, and the other authorizes the city to place before the voters two bond issues totaling $10,500,000.

One would be for an additional $2,500,000 stadium construction loan, the other an eight-million-dollar issue mainly for health clinic construction.

Other important bills signed included:

Granting $500,000 additional to the Board of Public Works to augment Department of Public Welfare funds; authorizing Cumberland and Allegany counties to issue $1,700,000 in bonds for flood control; regulating strip mining in Allegany County; giving the State Roads Commission greater latitude in the type of highways it may build under the 100-million-dollar road bond issue; revamping oyster dredging laws; and appropriating $125,000 for local airports to match Federal funds.

U. S., District Close Books on Bunch Death

Federal and District authorities "closed the books" again yesterday on the death of John Forrest Bunch.

Quickly on the heels of an FBI report exonerating Metropolitan Police of blame in the death of the 64-year-old carpenter were these developments:

1. Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy formally dismissed the coroner's jury which acted in the case and discontinued proceedings.

2. Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West prepared a report for the Commissioners confirming legality of the coroner's inquest which had been challenged by members of the Bunch family.

3. Formal withdrawal of the request by United States Attorney George Morris Fay that the inquest be reopened.

Died Six Days After Arrest

Bunch was arrested by police on a downtown street July 29 on a drunk charge and died six days later in Gallinger Hospital of a fractured skull and two brain hemorrhages.

When he complained of being ill early the same morning of his arrest, he was taken to Gallinger. His case was diagnosed as acute alcoholism and he was taken back to his cell upon being refused admittance at the hospital.

Later the same day, when Bunch was found still in a dazed condition, he was returned to the hospital where a diagnosis was given as "fever of undetermined origin." He died five days later.

Multiphased investigations, prodded throughout by the Bunch family's private probe, ranged through the police department and culminated with the FBI report Saturday. It had approval of Attorney General Tom C. Clark and said in part:

"There is no creditable evidence whatever of any beating, assaulting or other forms of police brutality."

No Evidence of Violation

Fay, in formal notice to Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, said the FBI report "disclosed no violations of any Federal criminal statutes" and added that the "investigation conducted by this office (the U. S. attorney's) led to the further conclusion that there was no evidence of any violation of any local criminal statutes.

"In view of the foregoing," Fay's letter said, "I am at this time withdrawing my request that the inquest be reopened.

"I am closing this case on the records of this office."

Cattle and Airplanes Take Turn About

Jackson, Wyo. (AP).—Air enthusiasts of this Jackson Hole town have found a new use for corrals.

They put their airplanes in the pole enclosures each night to keep cattle and horses from eating the fabric. The animals run outside the corral.

Then in the morning they put the airplanes out, and the cattle and horses inside the corral.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Yes, But Who Is the Prototype of Terry Lee?

Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer appears to be spending too much time having tea with society folks, and not enough in keeping up with the comic strips.

Last Sunday, our society columnist made reference to "Phil Cochran, the prototype of Terry in 'Terry and the Pirates'."

Actually, of course, Phil Cochran is the prototype of Flip Corkin, Terry's one-time commanding officer.

On our side of the railroad tracks, these things are very important.

Incidentally, it's remarkable how Phil Cochran's popularity has varied in the past 15 years.

Currently, he's well liked; but back in those days he was a pain in the neck. (He had the prettiest girl on the campus so thoroughly sewed up that nobody else could get so much as a "good morning" out of her.)

SPEAKING OF FOOD . . .

Nancy Kenaston's idea of organizing British girls for the sending overseas of CARE packages has led to an interesting development. Charles E. Copeland writes:

"I have just returned from Manchester. While there I had a dessert called Lemon Cheese, and enjoyed it very much.

"I wonder if I could have the recipe for it for the price of a CARE package?

"If Mrs. Kenaston or any of the other British ladies can furnish the recipe for this delicious dish, I'll send a food package to anybody they name."

PERSONAL NOTES

To the cab driver who talked us out of going to the Little Theater, and took us to see "Anthony Adverse" instead: Stick to driving your hack. You're no dramatic critic.

WELL-KNIT YARN

Susan Crumley of 4320 S. 35th st., Arlington, Va., asks:

"Do any of the District Liners know where I can get directions for knitting mittens on four needles? I can find directions for two needles, but not for four."

I trust that this item will make sense to the knitters, because it certainly doesn't make any to me. The only thing I can knit is my brows.

WOO WOO!

A recent edition of the Journal of Commerce advised its readers that:

"The International Wool Secretariat is distributing a half million copies of a new booklet, 'Woo in the World,' to teachers and students throughout the Nation."

Teachers and students of this popular pursuit are awaiting the first local distribution of the booklet with breathless anticipation.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Jack and Jill fell down the hill;
I call that plenty risky.
If water made them act that way
I think I'll stick to whisky.
Jay Aitch

ENGLISH SPOKEN HERE?

I've found a kindred spirit; two of them, in fact.

As Mr. and Mrs. Russell Roller of 7135 Chestnut st. nw. scan the newspaper ads, they mark in their memories outstanding examples of the art of copywriting.

For example, a local store is currently offering its patrons:

"Housecoats for women with zippers."

And if you think this is an isolated example, consider such classics as:

"Handbags for women with red and white stripes."

"Money belts made by a famous manufacturer with two pockets."

COINCIDENCE DEPT.

"How's this for a coincidence?" writes Mrs. Margaret T. Jones of 4905 1st st. nw.

"The other day I hailed a cab to go to work. When I told the driver where I wanted to go, he informed me that his very first fare that morning had been to the same address.

"On questioning him, I found that—out of all the thousands of cabs in Washington—I had chosen the one which had just brought to work one of the other girls in our office."

GIVE-AWAYS

Beautiful, red, full-grown male cat. We're moving to the West Coast." (Shepherd 0917.)

"Two kittens, which somebody threw out of a car near our home. Since we already have a puppy and two cats, we can't keep them." (Wisconsin 8553).

NO WEEBEES ALLOWED

A Warrenton (Va.) paper carried this classified ad a few days ago:

"ROOM FOR RENT—In Warrenton. Prefer man or woman."

Pretty choosy, eh?

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—A member of a French committee which is raising a fund for the support of Spanish refugees, went to Pablo Picasso for a contribution . . . The artist searched his pockets for money and found none. Then he reached for a sheet of paper, drew a sketch with colored crayons, and signed it. Picasso then gave it to the beaming committee man and said: "Here is my contribution."

MOVIES: William Wyler, the director, was in England last month and visited the Denham Studios where Sir Laurence Olivier is producing, directing and starring in the movie version of "Hamlet" . . . Wyler watched Olivier direct and then sighed: "It must be wonderful to go on the set in the morning and say to yourself: 'I am going to start today with a great big closeup of myself.'"

SOCIAL NOTE: Michael Romanoff arrived in New York yesterday. He went to the Stock Club where, after he paid his bill, he announced: "Behold, a Prince of Czarist Russia is about to go Communist. Watch me divvy." Then he started to divide the change the waiter had brought him. He divided it into four equal portions: "One share for the waiter, one for the captain, one for the doorman and one for the cabdriver who's taking me home."

SPORTS DEPT.: Hank Greenberg was at Toots Shor's one night and spoke of his plans to enter a hospital to have some bone chips removed from his right arm. A sports reporter overheard him and asked: "This means, of course, that you expect to be an active ballplayer next season" . . . "Oh, no," said Greenberg. "I don't want my arm to hurt when I'm clipping coupons."

BUSINESS DEPT.: Alfred E. Lyon, president of Philip Morris, asked his sales manager to find a suitable representative for the West Coast. After all the applicants were interviewed, a 46-year-old man was selected and was sent to Mr. Lyon's office for approval . . . The president of the cigarette company questioned the applicant and then said: "Age, 46. I think you're a little too old for this job" . . . "Mr. Lyon," the applicant replied, "I'm as fit as any man who's 10 years younger than me—because I don't smoke at all."

THEATER DEPT.: Albert Sharpe, who played Finian in "Finian's Rainbow" and now is working in Columbia's "The Return of October," once worked at the Argyll Birkenhead Theater near Liverpool. Sharpe tells of the theater's proprietor, D. J. Clark, who would give employment to a needy, talented actor—but under a 26-year contract which provided that at least once a year the actor would play there for £8 a week . . . One of the men he signed was Harry Lauder, who, after he became famous, offered Clark £1000 to be released from the contract. "Don't be silly, Harry," Clark told him. "Where would I get another Harry Lauder for £8 a week?"
